PREFACE.

O those who really hunger and thirst after righteousnes; and who therefore long to know what righteoufnefs is, that they may copy it: To thofe who long to be freed, not merely from the punifhment of fin after they die, but from fin itfelf while they live on earth; and who therefore wifh to know what fin is, that they may avoid it: To thofe who wifh to be really juftified by faith, by being made juft perfons by faith; and who cannot fatisfy either their confciences or reafons by fancying that God looks on them as right, when they know themfelves to be wrong, or that the God of truth will stoop to fictions (mifcalled forenfic) which would be confidered false and unjust in any human court of law: To those who cannot help trufting that union with Chrift must be fomething real and fubstantial, and not merely a metaphor, and a flower of rhetoric: To those, lastly, who cannot help feeing that the doctrine of Chrift in every man, as the Indwelling Word of God, The Light who lights every one who comes into the world, is no peculiar tenet of the Quakers, but one which runs through the whole of the Old and New Testaments, and without which they would both be unintelligible, just as the fame doctrine runs through the whole hiftory of the Early Church for thefirst two centuries, and is the only explanation of them;—To all these this noble little book will recommend itself; and may God bless the reading of it to them, and to all others no less.

As for its orthodoxy; to "evangelical" Christians Martin Luther's own words ought to be fufficient warrant. For he has faid that he owed more to this, than to any other book, faving the Bible and Saint Augustine. Those on the other hand, to whom Luther's name does not feem a fufficient guarantee, must recollect, that the Author of this book was a knight of the Teutonic order; one who confidered himfelf, and was confidered, as far as we know, by his contemporaries, an orthodox member of the Latin Church; that his friends and disciples were principally monks exercifing a great influence in the Catholic Church of their days; that one of their leaders was appointed by Pope John XXII. Nuncio, and overfeer of the Dominican order in Germany; and that during the hundred and feventy years which elapfed between the writing of this book and the Reformation, it incurred no ecclefiaftical cenfure whatfoever, in generations which were but too fond of making men offenders for a word.

Not that I agree with all which is to be found in this book. It is for its noble views of righteoufnefs and of fin that I honour it, and rejoice at feeing it published in English, now for the first time from an edition based on the perfect manufcript. But even in those points in which I should like to see it altered, I am well aware that there are ftrong authorities against me. The very expression, for instance, which most startles me, "vergottet," deified or made divine, is used, word for word, both by Saint Athanafe and Saint Augustine, the former of whom has faid : "He became man, that we might be made God;"* and the latter, "He called men Gods, as being deified by His grace, not as born of His substance."+ There are many passages, moreover, in the Epistles of the Apostles, which, if we paraphrafe them at all, we can hardly paraphrafe in weaker words. It feems to me fafer and wifer to cling to the letter of Scripture : but God forbid that I should wish to make such a man as the Author of the Theologia Germanica an offender for a word!

One point more may be worthy of remark. In many obscure passages of this book, words are used, both by the Author and by the Translator, in their frict, original, and fcientific meaning, as they are used in the Creeds, and not in that meaning which has of late crept into our very pulpits, under the influence of Locke's philosophy. When, for instance, it is faid that God is the Substance of all things; this expression, in the vulgar Lockite fense of substance, would mean that God is the matter or fuff of which all things are made; which would be the groffeft Pantheifm: but "Substance" in the true and ancient meaning of the word, as it appears in the Athanafian Creed, fignifies the very opposite; namely, that which ftands under the appearance and the matter; that by virtue of which a thing has its form, its life, its real existence, as far as it may have any; and thus in afferting that God is the Substance of all things, this book means that every thing (except fin, which is no thing, but the difease and fall of a thing) is a thought of God.

So again with Eternity. It will be found in this book to mean not merely fome future endlefs duration, but that ever-prefent moral world, governed by ever-living and abfolutely neceffary laws, in which we and all fpirits are now; and in which we fhould be equally, whether time and fpace, extension and duration, and the whole material univerfe to which they belong, became nothing this moment, or lasted endlefly.

Preface.

I think it neceffary to give these cautions, because by the light of Locke's philosophy, little or nothing will be difcerned in this book, and what little is difcerned, will probably be utterly mifunderstood. If any man wishes to fee clearly what is herein written, let him try to forget all popular modern dogmas and fystems, all popular philofophies (falfely fo called), and be true to the letter of his Bible, and to the inftincts which the Indwelling Word of God was wont to awaken in his heart, while he was yet a little unfophifticated child; and then let him be fure that he will find in this book germs of wider and deeper wifdom than its good author ever dreamed of; and that those great spiritual laws, which the Author only applies and that often inconfistently, to an afcetic and paffively contemplative life, will hold juft as good in the family, in the market, in the fenate, in the ftudy, ay, in the battle-field itfelf; and teach him the way to lead, in whatfoever ftation of life he may be placed, a truly manlike, becaufe a truly Chriftlike and Godlike life.

Historical Introduction.

BY THE TRANSLATOR.

HE Treatife before us was difcovered by Luther, who firft brought it into notice by an Edition of it which he published in 1516. A Second Edition, which came out two years later, he introduced with the following Preface :---

"We read that St. Paul, though he was of a weak and contemptible prefence, yet wrote weighty and powerful letters, and he boafts of himfelf that his ' fpeech is not with enticing words of man's device,' but ' full of the riches of all knowledge and wifdom.' And if we confider the wondrous ways of God, it is clear, that He hath never chofen mighty and eloquent preachers to speak His word, but as it is written: · Out of the mouths of babes and fucklings haft thou perfected praise,' Ps. viii. 2. And again, 'For wifdom opened the mouth of the dumb, and made the tongues of them that cannot speak eloquent,'Wifdomx.21. Again, Heblameth fuch as are high-minded and are offended at these simple ones. Confilium inopis, &c. 'Ye have made a mock at the counfel of the poor, becaufe he putteth his truft in the Lord,' Pf. xiv. 6.

Historical

"This I fay becaufe I will have every one warned who readeth this little book, that he should not take offence, to his own hurt, at its bad German, or its crabbed and uncouth words. For this noble book, though it be poor and rude in words, is fo much the richer and more precious in knowledge and divine wifdom. And I will fay, though it be boafting of myfelf and ' I fpeak as a fool,' that next to the Bible and St. Augustine, no book hath ever come into my hands, whence I have learnt, or would wish to learn more of what God, and Chrift, and man and all things are; and now I first find the truth of what certain of the learned have faid in fcorn of us theologians of Wittemberg, that we would be thought to put forward new things, as though there had never been men elsewhere and before our time. Yea, verily, there have been men, but God's wrath, provoked by our fins, hath not judged us worthy to fee and hear them; for it is well known that for a long time paft fuch things have not been

Historical

treated of in our universities; nay, it has gone fo far, that the Holy Word of God is not only laid on the shelf, but is almost mouldered away with dust and moths. Let as many as will, read this little book, and then fay whether Theology is a new or an old thing among us; for this book is not new. But if they fay as before, that we are but German theologians, we will not deny it. I thank God, that I have heard and found my God in the German tongue, as neither I nor they have yet found him in the Latin, Greek, or Hebrew tongue. God grant that this book may be fpread abroad, then we shall find that the German theologians are without doubt the best theologians.

(Signed, without date,)

Dr. MARTIN LUTHER, AUGUSTINIAN OF Wittemberg."

These words of Luther will probably be confidered to form a fufficient justification for an attempt to prefent the Theologia Germanica in an English drefs. When Luther sent it forth, its effort to revive the confcioufness of fpiritual life was received with enthufiasm by his fellow-countrymen, in whom that life was then breaking with volcanic energy through the clods of formalism and hypocrify, with which the Romish Church had fought to stifle its fires. No fewer than feventeen editions of the work appeared during the lifetime of Luther. Up to the prefent day, it has continued to be a favourite handbook of devotion in Germany, where it has paffed through certainly as many as fixty Editions, and it has alfo been widely circulated in France and the Netherlands, by means of Latin, French, and Flemish translations.

Historical

To the question, who was the author of a book which has exerted fo great an influence, no answer can be given, all the various endeavours to difcover him having proved fruitlefs. Till within the last few years, Luther was our fole authority for the text of the work, but, about 1850, a Manuscript of it was difcovered at Wurtzburg, by Profeffor Reufs, the librarian of the Univerfity there, which has fince been published verbatim by Professor Pfeiffer, of Prague. This Manuscript dates from 1497; confequently it is fomewhat older than Luther's time, and it alfo contains fome paffages not found in his editions. As upon careful comparison, it seemed to the Translator indisputably superior to the best modern editions based upon Luther's, it has been felected as the groundwork of the prefent translation, merely correcting from the former, one or two passages which appeared to contain errors of the press, or more likely of the transcriber's pen. The passages not found in Luther's edition are here enclosed between brackets.

As has been stated, the author of the Theologia Germanica is unknown; but it is evident from his whole cast of thought, as well as from a Preface attached to the Wurtzburg Manuscript, that he belonged to a class of men who sprang up in Southern Germany at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and who were distinguished for their earness piety and their practical belief in the prefence of the Spirit of God with all Christians, laity as well as clergy.

These men had fallen uponevil times. Their age was not indeed one of those periods in which the vigour of the nobler powers of the foul is enfeebled by the abundance of material prosperity and phyfical enjoyment, nor yet one of those in which they are utterly crushed out under the hoof of oppreffion and mifery; but it was an age in which conflicting elements were wildly ftruggling for the mastery. The highest fpiritual and temporal authorities were at deadly strife with each other and among themfelves; and in their contefts, there were few provinces or towns that did not repeatedly fuffer the horrors of war. The defolation caufed by its ravages, was however speedily repaired during the intervals of peace, by the extraordinary energy which the German nation displayed in that bloom of its manhood; fo that times of deep mifery and great prosperity rapidly alternated with each other. But on the whole, during the first half of this century, the fense of the calamities, which were continually recurring, predominated over the recollection of the calmer years, which were barely sufficient to allow breathing time between the successive waves that threatened to overwhelm focial order and happines.

Historical

The unqueftioning faith and honeft enthuliafm which had prompted the Crufades, no longer burnt with the fame fierce ardour, for the unhappy iffue of those facred enterprises, and the scandalous worldly ambition of the heads of the Church, had moderated its fervour and faddened the hearts of true believers. Yet the one Catholic, Christian creed still held an undivided and very real fovereignty over men's minds, and the fupremacy of the Church in things spiritual was never questioned, though many were beginning to feel that it was needful for the State to have an independent authority in things temporal, and the queftion was warmly agitated how much of the fpiritual authority refided in the Pope and how much in the bishops and doctors of the Church. But in whichever way the difpute between these rival claims might be adjusted, the reverence for the office of the clergy remained unimpaired. The cafe was very different with the reverence for their persons, which had fallen to a very low ebb, owing to the worldlinefs and immorality of their lives. This again was much encouraged by the conduct of the Popes, who, in their zeal to establish worldly dominion, made ecclesiastical appointments rather with a view to gain political adherents, or to acquire wealth by the fale of benefices, than with a regard to the fitnefs of the men felected, or the welfare of the people committed to their charge.

On the whole, it was an age of faith, though by no means of a blind, unreafoning taking things for granted. On the contrary, the evidences of extreme activity of mind meet us on every hand, in the monuments of its literature, architecture, and invention. A few facts firikingly illustrate the divergent tendencies of thought and public opinion. Thus we may remember, how it was currently reported that the profligate Pope Boniface VIII. was privately an unbeliever, even deriding the idea of the immortality of the foul, at the very time when he was maintaining against Philip the Fair, the right of the Pope to fit, as Christ's representative, in judgxxvi ment on the living and the dead, and to take the fword of temporal power out of the hands of those who misufed it.* Whether this accusation was true or not, it is a remarkable sign of the times that it should have been widely believed.

Historical

Some years later, and when the increafed corruptness of the clergy, after the removal of the Papal Court to Avignon, provoked still louder complaints, we see the religious and patriotic Emperor, Louis IV., accusing John XXII. of heress, in a public affembly held in the square of St. Peter's at Rome, and setting up another Pope "in order to please the Roman people." But though the new Pope was every way fitted, by his unblemished character and afcetic manners, to gain a hold on public efteem, we fee that the Emperor could not maintain him against the legitimately elected Pope, who, from his feat at Avignon, had power to harafs the Emperor fo greatly with his interdicts, that the latter, finding all efforts at conciliation fruitless, would have bought peace by unconditional fubmiffion, had not the Estates of the Empire refused to yield to fuch humiliation. Yet we find this very Pope obliged to yield and retract his opinions on a point of dogmatic theology. He had in a certain treatife propounded the opinion that the fouls of the pious would not be admitted to the immediate vision of the Deity until after the day of Judgment. The King of France, in 1433, called an affembly of Prelates

Historical

and theologians at his palace at Vincennes, where he invited them to difcufs before him the two questions, whether the fouls of departed faints would be admitted to an immediate vision of the Deity before the refurrection; and whether, if fo, their vision would be of the fame or of a different kind after the Judgment Day? The theological faculty having come to conclusions differing in fome refpects from those of the Pope, the King threatened the latter with the stake as a heretic, unless he retracted; and John XXII. iffued a bull, declaring that what he had faid or written, ought only to be received in fo far as it agreed with the Catholic Faith, the Church and Holy Scripture. No circumstance, perhaps, offers a more remarkable spectacle to us in its contrast with the spirit of our own times. At the prefent moment, when the Pope could not fit for a day in fafety on his temporal throne without the defence of French or Auftrian bayonets, we can fcarcely conceive an Emperor of France or Auftria taking upon himfelf to convene an affembly of Catholic theologians, and the latter pronouncing a cenfure on the dogmas propounded by the Head of the Church ! It would be hard to fay whether the Sovereigns of the prefent day would be more amufed by the abfurdity of devoting their time to fuch difcuffions, or the confciences of good Catholics more shocked at the prefumption of fuch a verdict.

Still it must not be forgotten that the importance of religious affairs in that age must not be ascribed too exclusively to earnestness about religion itself, for the ecclessifical interest predominated over the purely religious. The Pope and the Emperor reprefented the two great antagonistic powers, spiritual and temporal, the rivalry between which abforbed into itfelf all the political and focial questions that could then be agitated. The question of allegiance to the Pope or the Emperor was like the conteft between royalifm and republicanifm; the Ghibelline called himfelf a patriot, and was called by his adverfary, the Guelf, a worldly man or even an infidel, while he retorted by calling the Guelf a betrayer of his country, and an enemy of national liberties.

Historical

We cannot help feeing, however, that in those days both princes and people, wicked as their lives often were, did really believe in the Christian religion, and that while much of the mythological, and much of the formalistic element mingled in their zeal for outward obfervances, there was also much thoroughly fincere enthufiafmamong them. But both the great powers oppreffed the people, which looked alternately to the one fide or the other for emancipation from the particular grievances felt to be most galling at any given moment or place. In the frightful moral and phyfical condition of fociety, it was no wonder that a defpair of Providence should have begun to attack fome minds, which led to materialistic scepticism, while others fought for help on the path of wild fpeculation. The latter appears to have been the cafe with the Beghards or "Brothers and Sifters of the Free Spirit," who attempted to inftitute a reform by withdrawing the people altogether from the influence of the clergy, but whofe followers after a time too often fell into the vices of the priefts from whom they had feparated themfelves. In 1317, we find the Bishop of Ochsenstein complaining that Alface was filled with these Beghards, who appear to have been a kind of antinomian pantheists, teaching that the Spirit is bound by no law, and annihilating the diffinction between the Creator and the creature. Both in their excellences and defects they remind us of the modern "German Catholics," and of fome, too, of the recent Protestant fchools in Germany. There feems to have been no party of profeffed unbelievers, but that fome individuals were fuch in word as well as deed, appears from what Ruyfbroch of Bruffels,* (1300-1330) fays of those "who live in mortal fin, not troubling themfelves about God or his grace, but thinking virtue fheer nonfenfe, and the fpiritual life hypocrify or delufion; and hearing with difguft all mention of God or virtue, for they are perfuaded that there is no fuch thing as God, or Heaven, or Hell; for they acknowledge nothing but what is palpable to the fenfes."

The early part of the fourteenth century faw Germany divided for nine years between the rival claims of two Emperors, Frederick of Auftria, fupported by Pope John XXII. and a faction in Germany, and Louis of Bavaria, whofe caufe was efpoufed by a majority of the Princes of the Empire, as that of the defender of the dignity and independence of the State, and the champion of reform within the Church. The death of Frederick in 1322, left

Historical

Louis the undifputed Emperor, as far as nearly all his fubjects were concerned, and he would fain have purchafed peace with the Pope on any reafonable terms, that he might apply himfelf to the internal improvement of his dominions; but John XXII. was implacable, and continued to wage againft him and his adherents a deadly warfare, not clofed until his fucceffor Charles IV. fubmitted to all the papal demands, and to every indignity impofed upon him.

One of the moft fearful confequences of the enmity between John XXII. and Louis of Bavaria, to the unfortunate fubjects of the latter, was the Interdict under which his dominions were laid in 1324, and from which fome places, diftinguished for their loyalty to the Emperor, were not relieved for fix and twenty years. Louis, indeed, defired his fubjects to pay no regard to the bull of excommunication, and most of the laity, especially of the larger towns, would gladly have obeyed him in fpite of the Pope; but the greater part of the bishops and clergy held with their fpiritual head, and thus the inhabitants of Strafburg, Nuremberg, and other cities, where the civil authorities fided with the Emperor, and the clergy with the Pope, were left year after year without any religious privileges; for public worship ceased, and all the business of life went on without the benedictions of the Church, no rite being allowed but baptism and extreme unction.

After this had lasted fixteen years, the Emperor, wishing to relieve the anguished confciences of his people, issued, in conjunction with the Princes of the Empire, a great manifesto to all Christendom, refuting the Pope's acculations against him, maintaining that he who had been legally chosen by the Electors was, in virtue thereof, the rightful Emperor, and had received his dignity from God, and proclaiming that all who denied this were guilty of high treafon; that therefore none should be allowed any longer to observe the Interdict, and all who should continue to do fo, whether communities or individuals, should be deprived of every civil and ecclefiaftical right and privilege. This courageous edict found a response in the heart of the nation, and public opinion continually declared itfelf more ftrongly on the fide of the Emperor. Yet on the whole it rather increased the general anarchy; for in many places the priefts and monks were stedfast in their allegiance to the Pope, and, refufing to administer public service, were altogether banished from the towns, and the churches and convents closed. In Strafburg, for instance, where the regular clergy had long fince ceafed to perform religious rites, the Dominicans and Franciscans had continued to preach and perform mass; but now, they too, frightened by the Edict, which placed them in direct opposition to the Pope, dared no longer to difregard the renewed fentence of excommunication hanging over them, and refusing to read mass, were expelled by the Town Council. Many of these banished clergy wandered about in great distress, with difficulty finding refuge among the fcattered rural population, and the fufferings they endured proved the fincerity of their confcientious scruples. Some few, either from worldly motives, or out of pity for the Historical people, remained at their pofts. The former indeed throve by the miferies of their fellow-creatures, driving a ufurious trade in the famine of fpiritual confolation; for it is upon record, that in time of peftilence, the price of fhrift has been as much as fixty florins!

The fpectacle of fuch difcord between the clergy and the laity, was fomething unspeakably shocking to the Chriftian world in that age, and the energetic proceedings of the magistracy must have utterly staggered the faith of many. Of all the events that were ftirring up men's paffions and energies, none was more calculated to move their fouls to the very centre, than to find themfelves compelled to ftand up in arms against those whom they had been wont to bow down before, and to reverence as the fource of those spiritual bleffings, for the fake of which they were now driven in desperation to take this awful step.

To these political and religious diffenfions were added, in process of time, other miseries. After it had been preceded by earthquakes, hurricanes and famine, the Black Death broke out, fpreading terror and defolation through Southern Europe. Men faw in these frightful calamities the judgments of God, but looked in vain for any to fhow them a way of deliverance and escape. Some believed that the last day was approaching; fome, remembering an old prophecy, looked with hope for the return of the Great Emperor Frederick II. to reftore justice and peace in the world, to punish the wicked clergy, and help the poor and oppreffed flock to their rights. Others traversed the country in processions, fcourging themfelves and praying with a loud voice, in order to atone for their fins and appeafe God's anger, and inveighing against man's unbelief, which had called down God's wrath upon the earth; while fome thought to do God fervice, by wreaking vengeance on the people which had flain the Lord, and thousands of wretched Jews perished in the flames kindled by frantic terror. "All things worked together to deepen the fense of the corruptness of the Church, to lead men's thoughts onwards from their physical to their spiritual wants, to awaken reflection on the judgments of God, and to fix their eyes on the indications of the future,"* fo that John of Winterthur was probably not alone, in applying to his own times, what St. Paul fays of the perils of the latter days.

Historical

* Neander, Kirchengeschichte. B. 6, S. 728.

In these chaotic times, and in the countries where the ftorms raged most fiercely, there were fome who fought that peace which could not be found on earth, in intercourfe with a higher world. Destitute of help and comfort and guidance from man, they took refuge in God, and finding that to them He had proved " a prefent help in time of trouble," " as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land," they tried to bring their fellow-men to believe and partake in a life raifed above the troubles of this world. They defired to flow them that that Eternal life and enduring peace, which Chrift had promised to His disciples, was, of a truth, to be found by the Way which He had pointed out,-by a living union with Him and the Father who had fent Him.

With this aim, like-minded men and women joined themfelves together, that by communion of heart and mutual counfel they might strengthen each other in their common efforts to revive the fpiritual life of those around them. The Affociation they founded was kept fecret, left through misconception of their principles, they might fall under fuspicion of herefy, and the Inquisition should put a stop to their labours; but they defired to keep themfelves aloof from every thing that favoured of herefy or diforder. On the contrary, they carefully observed all the precepts of the Church, and carried their obedience fo far that many of their number were among the priefts, who were banished for obeying the Pope, when the Emperor ordered them to difregard the Interdict. They affumed the appellation of "Friends of God," (Gottesfreunde)

Historical

Introduction. xliii

and, in the course of a few years, their affociations extended along the Rhine provinces from Bafle to Cologne, and eastwards through Swabia, Bavaria, and Franconia. Strafburg, Constance, Nuremberg and Nordlingen were among their chief feats. Their diftinguishing doctrines were felf-renunciation,-the complete giving up of felf-will to the will of God ;- the continuous activity of the Spirit of God in all believers, and the intimate union poffible between God and man; --- the worthleffnefs of all religion based upon fear or the hope of reward; - and the effential equality of the laity and clergy, though for the fake of order and discipline, the organization of the Church was neceffary. They often appealed to the declaration of Chrift (John xv. 15), "Henceforth I call you not fervants; for the fervant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you ;" and from this they probably derived their name of "Friends of God." Their mode of action was fimply perfonal, for they made no attempt to gain political and hierarchical power, but exerted all their influence by means of preaching, writing and focial intercourfe. The Affociation counted among its members priefts, monks, and laity, without diftinction of rank or fex. Its leaders ftood likewife in close connection with feveral convents, especially those of Engenthal and Maria-Medingen near Nuremberg, prefided over by the fifters Chriftina and Margaret Ebner, much of whofe correspondence is still extant. Agnes, the widow of King Andrew of

Historical

Hungary, and various knights and burghers are also named as belonging to it.

Foremost among the leaders of this party should be mentioned the celebrated Tauler, a Dominican monk of Strafburg, who spent his life in preaching and teaching up and down the country from Strafburg to Cologne, and whose influence is to this day active among his countrymen by means of his admirable fermons, which are still widely read. At the time of the Interdict, he wrote a noble appeal to the clergy not to forfake their flocks, maintaining that if the Emperor had finned, the blame lay with him only, not with his wretched fubjects, fo that it was a crying shame to vifit his guilt upon the innocent people, but that their unjust oppression would be recompenfed to them by God hereafter. He acted up to his own principles, and when the Black Death was raging in Strafburg, where it carried off 16,000 victims, he was unwearied in his efforts to administer aid and confolation to the fick and dying.

Much of Tauler's religious fervour and light he himfelf attributed to the instructions of a layman, his friend. It is now known from contemporary records that this was Nicholas of Bafle, a citizen of that Free town and a fecret Waldenfian. Little is known of his life beyond the fact that he was intimately connected with many of the heads of this party, and was reforted to by them for guidance and help; for, being under fufpicion of herefy, he had to conceal all his movements from the Inquisition. He succeeded, however, in carrying on his labours and eluding his enemies, until he reached an advanced age; but at length, venturing alone and unprotected into France, he was taken, and burnt at Vienne in 1 382. Another friend of Tauler's, and like him an eloquent and powerful preacher, whofe fermons are still read with delight, was Henry Suso, a Dominican monk, belonging to a knightly family in Swabia.

One of the leaders of the "Friends of God," Nicholas of Strafburg, was in 1326 appointed by John XXII. nuncio, with the overfight of the Dominican order throughout Germany, and dedicated to that Pope an Effay of great learning and ability, refuting the prevalent interpretations of Scripture, which referred the coming of Antichrift and the Judgment day to the immediate future. Thus we fee that the "Friends of God" were not confined to one political party, and this likewife appears from the history of another celebrated member of this fect, Henry of Nordlingen, a prieft of Constance, who, like Sufo, was banished for his adherence to the Pope. One of the most remarkable men of this fect was a layman and married, Rulman Merfwin, belonging to a high family at Strafburg. He appears to have been led to a religious life by the influence of Tauler, who was his confessor. He is the author of feveral mystical works which, he fays, he wrote "to do good to his fellow creatures," but he contributed perhaps still more largely to their benefit by his activity in charitable works, for he established one hospital and seems to have had the overfight of others alfo. He likewife gave largely to churches and convents, but is beft known by having founded a house for the Knights of St. John in Strasburg. The characteristic doctrines of the Friends of God have already been indicated. That they should not have fallen into some exaggerations was scarcely possible, but where they have done so, it may generally be traced to the influence of the monastic life to which most of them were dedicated, and to the perplexities of their age.

xlviii

Historical

The book before us was probably written fomewhere about 1350, fince it refers to Tauler as already well known. It was the practice of the "Friends of God," to conceal their names as much as poffible when they wrote, left a defire for fame fhould mingle with their endeavours to be ufeful. This is probably the reafon why we have no indication of its authorfhip beyond a preface, which the Wurtzburg Manufcript poffeffes in common with that which was in Luther's hands, and from which it appears that the writer " was of the Teutonic order, a prieft and a warden in the house of the Teutonic order in Frankfort." A translation of this Preface is prefixed to the prefent volume. Till the difcovery of the Wurtzburg Manuscript, it was supposed that this Preface was from Luther's hand, who merely embodied in it the tradition which he had received from fome fource unknown to us; and hence, fome, difregarding its authority, have afcribed the Theologia Germanica to Tauler, whofe ftyle it refembles fo much that it might be taken for his work, but for the reference to him already mentioned. Since however the antiquity of the Preface is now proved, we must be content with the information which it affords us, unlefs any further difcoveries among old manufcripts fhould throw fresh light upon the subject.

Should this attempt to introduce the writings of the "Friends of God" in England, awaken an intereft in them and their works, the Tranflator propofes to follow up the prefent volume with an account of Tauler and felections from his writings; believing that the ftudy of thefe German theologians, who were already called old in Luther's age, would furnish the best antidote to what of mischief English readers may have derived from German theology, falfely fo called.

LETTER FROM CHEVALIER BUNSEN TO THE TRANSLATOR.

77 Marina, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, 11th May, 1854.

My dear Friend,

OUR Letter and the proof fheets of your Translation of the Theologia Germanica, with Kingfley's Preface and your Introduction, were delivered to me yefterday, as I was leaving Carlton Terrace to breathe once more, for a few days, the refreshing air of this quiet, lovely place. You told me, at the time, that you had been led to ftudy Tauler and the Theologia Germanica by fome converfations which we had on their fubjects in 1851, and you now with me to state to your readers, in a few lines, what place I conceive this fchool of Germanic theology to hold in the general development of chriftian thought, and what appears to me to be the bearing of this work in particular upon the prefent dangers and profpects of Chriftianity, as well as upon the eternal interests of religion in the heart of every man and woman.

Letter to the

In complying willingly with your requeft, I may begin by faying that, with Luther, I rank this fhort treatife next to the Bible, but unlike him, fhould place it before rather than after St. Augustine. That school of pious, learned, and profound men of which this book is, as it were, the popular catechifm, was the Germanic counterpart of Romanic fcholafticifm, and more than the revival of that Latin theology which produced fo many eminent thinkers, from Augustine, its father, to Thomas Aquinas, its last great genius, whose death did not take place until after the birth of Dante, who again was the contemporary of the Socrates of the Rhenish fchool,—Meister Eckart, the Dominican.

The theology of this fchool was the first protest of the Germanic mind against the Judaism and formalism of the Byzantine and medieval Churches, —the hollowness of fcience to which fcholasticism had led, and the rottenness of fociety which a pompous hierarchy strove in vain to conceal, but had not the power nor the will to correct. Eckart and Tauler, his pupil, brought religion home from fruitlefs fpeculation, and reafonings upon imaginary or impoffible fuppofitions, to man's own heart and to the understanding of the common people, as Socrates did the Greek philosophy. There is both a remarkable analogy and a striking contrast between the great Athenian and those Dominican friars. Socrates did full justice to the deep ethical ideas embodied in the established religion of his country and its venerated mysteries, which he far preferred to the shallow philosophy of the sophists; but he diffuaded his pupils from feeking an initiation into the mysteries, or at least from refting their convictions and hopes upon them, exhorting them to rely, not upon the oracles of Delphi, but upon the oracle in their own bosom.

The "Friends of God," on the other hand, believing (like Dante) most profoundly in the truth of the Christian religion, on which the eftablished church of their age, notwithstanding its corruptions, was effentially founded, recommended fubmiffion to the ordinances of the church as a wholefome preparatory discipline for many minds. Like the faint of Athens, however, they fpoke plain truth to the people. To their disciples, and those who came to them for instruction, they exhibited the whole depth of that real christian philofophy, which opens to the mind after all scholastic conventionalism has been thrown away, and the foul liftens to the refponfe which Chrift's Gofpel and God's creation find in a fincere heart and a felf-facrificing life; — a philofophy which, confidered merely as a speculation, is far more profound than any fcholaftic fyftem. But, in a ftyle that was intelligible to all, they preached that no fulfilment of rites and ceremonies, nor of fo-called religious duties, in fact, no outward works, however meritorious, can either give peace to man's confcience, nor yet give him ftrength to bear up againft the temptations of profperity and the trials of adverfity.

In following this courfe they brought the people back from hollow profession and real despair, to the blessings of gospel religion, while they opened to philosophic minds a new career of thought. By teaching that man is justified by faith, and by faith alone, they prepared the popular intellectual element of the Reformation; by teaching that this faith has its philosophy, as fully able to carry conviction to the understanding, as faith is to give peace to the troubled confcience, they paved the way for that fpiritual philosophy of the mind, of which Kant laid the foundation. But they were not controverfialist, as the Reformers of the fixteenth century were driven to be by their pofition, and not men of science exclusively, as the mafters of modern philosophy in Germany were and are. Although most of them friars, or laymen connected with the religious orders of the time, they were men of the people and men of action. They preached the faving faith to the people in churches, in hospitals, in the ftreets and public places. In the ftrength of this faith, Tauler, when he had been already for years the universal object of admiration as a theologian and preacher through all the free cities on the Rhine, from Bafle to Cologne, humbled himfelf, and remained filent for the space of two years, after the mysterious layman had shown him the infufficiency of his fcholaftic learning and preaching. In the strength of this faith, he braved the Pope's Interdict, and gave the confolations of religion to the people of Strafburg, during the dreadful plague which depopulated that flourishing city. For this faith, Eckart fuffered with patience flander and perfecution, as formerly he had borne with meeknefs, honours and For this faith, Nicolaus of praise. Basle, who sat down as a humble stranger at Tauler's feet to become the inftrument of his real enlightenment, died a martyr in the flames. In this fenfe, the "Friends of God" were, like the Apostles, men of the people and practical Christians, while as men of thought, their ideas contributed powerfully to the great efforts of the European nations in the fixteenth century.

Let me, therefore, my dear friend, lay afide all philofophical and theological terms, and ftate the principle of the golden book which you are just prefenting to the English public, in what I confider, with Luther, the best Theological exponent, in plain Teutonic, thus:—

Sin is felfifhnefs:

Godliness is unselfishness:

- A godly life is the ftedfaft working out of inward freeness from felf:
- To become thus godlike is the bringing back of man's first nature.

On this last point,—man's divine dignity and destiny,—Tauler speaks as

Letter to the

ftrongly as our author, and almost as ftrongly as the Bible. Man is indeed to him God's own image. "As a fculptor," he fays fomewhere, with a ftriking range of mind for a monk of the fourteenth century, " is faid to have exclaimed indignantly on feeing a rude block of marble, 'what a godlike beauty thou hideft !' thus God looks upon man in whom God's own image is hidden." "We may begin," he fays in a kindred paffage, " by loving God in hope of reward, we may express ourfelves concerning Him in fymbols (Bilder) but we must throw them all away, and much more we must fcorn all idea of reward, that we may love God only becaufe He is the Supreme Good, and contemplate His eternal nature as the real fubstance of our own foul."

But let no one imagine that thefe men, although doomed to paffiveness in many refpects, thought a contemplative or monkish life a condition of fpiritual Christianity, and not rather a danger to it. " If a man truly loves God," fays Tauler, " and has no will but to do God's will, the whole force of the river Rhine may run at him and will not difturb him or break his peace; if we find outward things a danger and disturbance, it comes from our appropriating to ourfelves what is God's." But Tauler, as well as our Author, uses the strongest language to express his horror of Sin, man's own creation, and their view on this fubject forms their great contrast to the philosophers of the Spinozistic school. Among the Reformers, Luther stands nearest to them, with respect to the great fundamental points of theological teaching, but their intense dread of Sin as a rebellion against God, is shared both by Luther and Calvin. Among later theologians, Julius Müller, in his profound Effay on Sin, and Richard Rothe, in his great work on Christian Ethics, come nearest to them in depth of thought and ethical earneftness, and the first of these eminent writers carries out, as it appears to me, most confistently that fundamental truth of the Theologia Germanica that there is no fin but Selfishness, and that all Selfishness is fin.

Such appear to me to be the characteriftics of our book and of Tauler. I may be allowed to add, that this fmall but golden Treatife has been now for almost forty years, an unspeakable comfort to me and to many Christian friends (most of whom have already departed in peace), to whom I had the happiness of introducing it. May it in your admirably faithful and lucid translation become a real "book for the million" in England, a privilege which it already shares in Germany with Tauler's matchless Sermons, of which I rejoice to hear that you are making a felection for publication. May it become a bleffing to many a longing Chriftian heart in that dear country of yours, which I am on the point of leaving, after many happy years of refidence, but on which I can never look as a ftrange land to me, any more than I shall ever confider myself as a stranger in that home of old Teutonic liberty and energy, which I have found to be alfo the home of practical Christianity and of warm and faithful affection.

A Preface.

Thislittle Bookhath the Almighty and Eternal Bod spoken by the mouth of a wile, understanding, faithful, righteous man, His friend, who aforetime was of the Teutonic order, a Prieft and a Marden in the house of the Teutonic order in Frankfort : and it giveth much pretious infight into divine truth, and especially teacheth how and whereby we may discern the true and upright Friends of God from those unrighteous and falle free-thinkers, who are most hurtful to the Holy Thurch.

CHAPTER I.

Of that which is perfect and that which is in part, and how that which is in part is done away, when that which is perfect is come.

T. PAUL faith, "When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."* Now mark what is "that which is perfect," and "that which is in part."

"That which is perfect" is a Being, who hath comprehended and included all things in Himfelf and His own Subftance, and without whom, and befide whom, there is no true Substance, and inwhom all things have their Substance. For He is the Substance of all things, and is in Himfelf unchangeable and immoveable, and changeth and moveth all things elfe. But " that which is in part," or the Imperfect, is that which hath its fource in, or fpringeth from the Perfect; just as a brightness or a visible appearance floweth out from the fun or a candle, and appeareth to be fomewhat, this or that. And it is called a creature; and of all these "things which are in part," none is the Perfect. So also the Perfect is none of the things which are in part. The things which are in part can be apprehended, known, and expressed; but the Perfect cannot be apprehended, known, or expressed by any creature as creature. Therefore we do not give a name to the Perfect, for it is none of thefe. The creature as creature cannot know nor apprehend it, name nor conceive it.

" Now when that which is Perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." But when doth it come? I fay, when as much as may be, it is known, felt and tafted of the foul. [For the lack lieth altogether in us, and not in it. In like manner the fun lighteth the whole world, and is as near to one as another, yet a blind man feeth it not; but the fault thereof lieth in the blind man, not in the fun. And like as the fun may not hide its brightnefs, but must give light unto the earth (for heaven indeed draweth its light and heat from another fountain), fo alfo God, who is the higheft Good, willeth not to hide Himfelf from any, wherefoever He findeth a devout foul, that is thoroughly purified from all creatures. For in what measure we put off the creature, in the fame meafure are we able to put on the Creator; neither more nor lefs. For if mine eye is to fee anything, it must be fingle, or else be purified from all other things; and where heat and light enter in, cold and darkness must needs depart; it cannot be otherwife.]

But one might fay, " Now fince the Perfect cannot be known nor apprehended of any creature, but the foul is a creature, how can it be known by the foul?" Anfwer: This is why we fay, "by the foul as a creature." We mean it is impoffible to the creature in virtue of its creature-nature and qualities, that by which it faith " I" and "myfelf." For in whatfoever creature the Perfect shall be known, therein creature-nature, qualities, the I, the Self and the like, must all be lost and done away. This is the meaning of that faying of St. Paul: "When that which is perfect is come," (that is, when it is known,) " then that which is in part" (to wit, creature-nature, qualities, the I, the Self, the Mine) will be defpifed and counted for nought. So long as we think much of these things, cleave to them with love, joy, pleasure or defire, so long remaineth the Perfect unknown to us.

But it might further be faid, "Thou fayeft, befide the Perfect there is no Substance, yet fayest again that somewhat floweth out from it: now is not that which hath flowed out from it, fomething befide it?" Anfwer: This is why we fay, befide it, or without it, there is no true Substance. That which hath flowed forth from it, is no true Substance, and hath no Substance except in the Perfect, but is an accident, or a brightness, or a visible appearance, which is no Substance, and hath no Substance except in the fire whence the brightness flowed forth, such as the sun or a candle.

CHAP. II.

Of what Sin is, and how we must not take unto ourselves any good Thing, seeing that it belongeth unto the true Good alone.

HE Scripture and the Faith and the Truth fay, Sin is nought elfe, butthat the creature turn-eth away from the unchangeable Good and betaketh itfelf to the changeable; that is to fay, that it turneth away from the Perfect, to " that which is in part" and imperfect, and moft often to itfelf. Now mark : when the creature claimeth for its own anything good, fuch as Subftance, Life, Knowledge, Power, and in fhort whatever we fhould call good, as if it were that, or poffeffed that, or that were itfelf, or that proceeded from it,—as often as this cometh to pafs, the creature goeth aftray. What did the devil do elfe, or what was his going aftray and his fall elfe, but that he claimed for himfelf to be alfo fomewhat, and would have it that fomewhat was his, and fomewhat was due to him? This fetting up of a claim and his I and Me and Mine, thefe were his going aftray, and his fall. And thus it is to this day.

CHAP. III.

How Man's Fall and going astray must be amended as Adam's Fall was.

HAT elfe did Adam do but this fame thing? It is faid, it was becaufe Adam ate the apple that he was loft, or fell. I fay, it was becaufe of his claiming fomething for his own, and becaufe of his I, Mine; Me, and the like. Had he eaten feven apples, and yet never claimed anything for his own, he would not have fallen : but as foon as he called fomething his own, he fell, and would have fallen if he had never touched an apple. Behold! I have fallen a hundred times more often and deeply, and gone a hundred times farther aftray than Adam; and not all mankind could amend his fall, or bring him back from going aftray. But how shall my fall be amended? It muft be healed as Adam's fall was healed, and on the felf-fame wife. By whom, and on what wife was that healing brought to pass? Mark this: man could not without God, and God should not without man. Wherefore God took human nature or manhood upon himfelf and was made man, and man was made divine. Thus the healing was brought to pass. So also must my fall be healed. I cannot do the work without God, and God may not or will not without me; for if it shall be accomplished, in me, too, God must be made man; in fuch fort that God must take to himself all that is in me, within and without, fo that there may be nothing in me which ftriveth against God or hindereth his work. Now if God took to himfelf all men that are in the world, or ever were, and were made man in them, and they were made divine in him, and this work were not fulfilled in me, my fall and my wandering would never be amended except it were fulfilled in me alfo. And in this bringing back and healing, I can, or may, or shall do nothing of myself, but just fimply yield to God, fo that He alone may do all things in me and work, and I may fuffer him and all his work and his divine will. And becaufe I will not do so, but I count myself to be my own, and fay "I," "mine," "me" and the like, God is hindered, fo that he cannot do his work in me alone and without hindrance; for this caufe my fall and my going aftray remain unhealed. Behold! this all cometh of my claiming fomewhat for my own.

CHAP. IV.

How Man, when he claimeth any good Thing for his own, falleth, and toucheth God in his Honour.

OD faith, "I will not give my glory to another."* This is as much as to fay, that praife and honour and glory belong to none but to God only. But now, if I call any good thing my own, as if I were it, or of myfelf had power or did or knew anything, or as if anything were mine or of me, or belonged to me, or were due to me or the like, I take unto myfelf fomewhat of honour and glory, and do two evil things: Firft, I fall and go aftrayas aforefaid: Secondly, I touch God in his honour and take unto myfelf what belongeth to God * Ifaiah xlii. 8 only. For all that muft be called good belongeth to none but to the true eternal Goodnefs which is God only, and whofo taketh it unto himfelf, committeth unrighteoufnefs and is againft God.

CHAP. V.

How we are to take that Saying, that we must come to be without Will, Wisdom, Love, Desire, Knowledge, and the like.

ERTAIN men fay that we ought to be without will, wifdom, love, defire, knowledge, and the like. Hereby is not to be underflood that there is to be no knowledge in man, and that God is not to be loved by him, nor defired and longed for, nor praifed and honoured; for that were a great lofs, and man were like the beafts [and as the brutes that have no reafon.] But it meaneth that man's knowledge should be fo clear and perfect that he should acknowledge of a truth [that in himfelf he neither hath nor can do any good thing, and that none of his knowledge, wifdom and art, his will, love and good works do come from himfelf, nor are of man, nor of any creature, but] that all these are of the eternal God, from whom they all proceed. As Chrift himfelf faith, "Without me, ye can do nothing."* St. Paul faith alfo, "What haft thou that thou haft not received ?"+ As much as to fay-nothing. " Now if thou didft receive it, why doft thou glory as if thou hadft not received it?" Again he faith, "Not that we are fufficient of ourfelves to think anything as of ourfelves, but our fufficiency is of God." ‡] Now when a man duly perceiveth these things in himfelf, he and the creature fall behind, and he doth not call any thing his own, and the lefs he taketh * John xv. 5. † I Cor. iv. 7. ‡ 2 Cor. iii. 5.

this knowledge unto himfelf, the more perfect doth it become. So alfo is it with the will, and love and defire, and the like. For the lefs we call thefe things our own, the more perfect and noble and godlike do they become, and the more we think them our own, the bafer and lefs pure and perfect do they become.

Behold on this fort must we cast all things from us, and strip ourselves of them; we must refrain from claiming anything for our own. When we do this, we shall have the best, fullest, clearest and noblest knowledge that a man can have, and alfo the nobleft and purest love, will and defire; for then these will be all of God alone. It is much better that they should be God's than the creature's. Now that I ascribe anything good to myfelf, as if I were, or had done, or knew, or could perform any good thing, or that it were mine, this is all of fin and folly. For if the truth were rightly known by me, I fhould also know that I am not that good thing and that it is not mine, nor of me, and that I do not know it, and cannot do it, and the like. If this came to pass, I should needs cease to call anything my own.

It is better that God, or his works, should be known, as far as it be poffible to us, and loved, praifed and honoured, and the like, and even that man fhould but vainly imagine he loveth or praifeth God, than that God fhould be altogether unpraised, unloved, unhonoured and unknown. For when the vain imagination and ignorance are turned into an understanding and knowledge of the truth, the claiming anything for our own will ceafe of itfelf. Then the man fays: Behold! I, poor fool that I was, imagined it was I, but behold! it is, and was, of a truth, God!"

CHAP. VI.

How that which is beft and nobleft should also be loved above all Things by us, merely because it is the best.

MASTER called Boetius faith, " It is of fin that we do not love that which is He hath fpoken the truth.

That which is beft fhould be the deareft of all things to us; and in our love of it, neither helpfulnefs nor unhelpfulnefs, advantage nor injury, gain nor lofs, honour nor difhonour, praife nor blame, nor anything of the kind fhould be regarded; but what is in truth the nobleft and beft of all things, fhould be alfo the deareft of all things, and that for no other caufe than that it is the nobleft and beft.

Hereby may a man order his life within and without. His outward life: for among the creatures one is better than another, according as the Eternal Good manifesteth itself and worketh more in one than in another. Now that creature in which the Eternal Good most manifesteth itself, shineth forth, worketh, is most known and loved, is the best, and that wherein the Eternal Good is least manifested is the least good of all creatures. Therefore when we have to do with the creatures and hold converse with them, and take note of their diverse qualities, the best creatures must always be the dearest to us, and we must cleave to them, and unite ourfelves to them, above all to those which we attribute to God as belonging to him or divine, fuch as wifdom, truth, kindness, peace, love, justice, and the like. Hereby shall we order our outward man, and all that is contrary to these virtues we must eschew and flee from.

But if our inward man were to make a leap and fpring into the Perfect, we should find and taste how that the Perfect is without measure, number or end, better and nobler than all which is imperfect and in part, and the Eternal above the temporal or perishable, and the fountain and fource above all that floweth or can ever flow from it. Thus that which is imperfect and in part would become tafteless and be as nothing to us. Be affured of this: All that we have faid must come to pass if we are to love that which is nobleft, highest and best.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Eyes of the Spirit wherewith Man looketh into Eternity and into Time, and how the one is hindered of the other in its Working.

ET us remember how it is written and faid that the foul of Chrift had two eyes, a right and a left eye. In the beginning, when the foul of Chrift was created, fhe fixed her right eye upon eternity and the Godhead, and remained in the full intuition and enjoyment of the Divine Effence and Eternal Perfection; and continued thus unmoved and undifturbed by all the accidents and travail, fuffering, torment and pain that ever befell the outward man. But with the left eye fhe beheld the creature and perceived all things therein, and took note of the difference between the creatures, which were better or worfe, nobler or meaner; and thereafter was the outward man of Chrift ordered.

Thus the inner man of Chrift, according to the right eye of his foul, ftood in the full exercise of his divine nature, in perfect bleffednefs, joy and eternal peace. But the outward man and the left eye of Chrift's foul, ftood with him in perfect fuffering, in all tribulation, affliction and travail; and this in fuch fort that the inward and right eye remained unmoved, unhindered and untouched by all the travail, fuffering, grief and anguish that ever befell the outward man. It hath been faid that when Chrift was bound to the pillar and fcourged, and when he hung upon the crofs, according to the outward man, yet his inner man, or foul according to the right eye, flood in as full poffeffion of divine joy and bleffednefs as it did after his afcenfion, or as it doth now. In like manner his outward man, or foul with the left eye, was never hindered, difturbed or troubled by the inward eye in its contemplation of the outward things that belonged to it.

Now the created foul of man hath alfo two eyes. The one is the power of feeing into eternity, the other of feeing into time and the creatures, of perceiving how they differ from each other as aforefaid, of giving life and needful things to the body, and ordering and governing it for the beft. But these two eyes of the soul of man cannot both perform their work at once; but if the foul shall fee with the right eye into eternity, then the left eye muft clofe itfelf and refrain from working, and be as though it were dead. For if the left eye be fulfilling its office toward outward things; that is, holding converfe with time and the creatures; then must the right eye be hindered in its working; that is, in its contemplation.

Therefore whofoever will have the one must let the other go; for " no man can ferve two masters."

CHAP. VIII.

How the Soul of Man, while it is yet in the Body, may obtain a Foretaste of eternal Blessedness.

T hath been afked whether it be poffible for the foul, while it is yet in the body, to reach fo high as to caft a glance into eternity, and receive a foretafte of eternal life and eternal bleffednefs. This is commonly denied; and truly fo in a fenfe. For it indeed cannot be fo long as the foul is taking heed to the body, and the things which minifter and appertain thereto, and to time and the creature, and is difturbed and troubled and diftracted thereby. For if the foul fhall rife to fuch a ftate, fhe muft be quite pure, wholly ftripped and bare of all images, and be entirely feparate from all creatures, and above all from herfelf. Now many think this is not to be done and is impoffible in this prefent time. But St. Dionyfius maintains that it is poffible, as we find from his words in his Epistle to Timothy, where he faith: "For the beholding of the hidden things of God, shalt thou forfake sense and the things of the flesh, and all that the fenfes can apprehend, and that reafon of her own powers can bring forth, and all things created and uncreated that reafon is able to comprehend and know, and shalt take thy stand upon an utter abandonment of thyfelf, and as knowing none of the aforefaid things, and enter into union with Him who is, and who is above all existence and all knowledge." Now if he did not hold this to be poffible in this prefent time, why fhould he teach it and enjoin it on us in this prefent time? But it behoveth you to know that a mafter hath faid on this paffage of St. Dionyfius, that it is poffible, and may happen to a man often, till he become fo accuftomed to it, as to be able to look into eternity whenever he will. [For when a thing is at first very hard to a man and strange, and seemingly quite impoffible, if he put all his ftrength and energy into it, and perfevere therein, that will afterward grow quite light and eafy, which he at first thought quite out of reach, feeing that it is of no use to begin any work, unless it may be brought to a good end.]

And a fingle one of these excellent glances is better, worthier, higher and more pleasing to God, than all that the creature can perform as a creature. [And as soon as a man turneth himfelf in spirit, and with his whole heart and mind entereth into the mind of God which is above time, all that ever he hath lost is restored in a moment.

And if a man were to do thus a thoufand times in a day, each time a fresh and real union would take place; and in this fweet and divine work standeth the truest and fullest union that may be in this present time. For he who hath attained thereto, asketh nothing further, for he hath found the Kingdom of Heaven and Eternal Life on earth.]

CHAP. IX.

How it is better and more profitable for a Man that he should perceive what God will do with him, or to what end He will make Use of him, than if he knew all that God had ever wrought, or would ever work through all the Creatures; and how Blessedness lieth alone in God, and not in the Creatures, or in any Works.

E should mark and know of a very truth that all manner of virtue and goodness, and even that Eternal Good which is God Himfelf, can never make a man virtuous, good, or happy, fo long as it is outfide the foul; [that is, fo long as the man is holding converfe with outward things through his fenfes and reafon, and doth not withdraw into himfelf and learn to underftand his own life, who and what he is.] The like is true of fin and evil. [For all manner of fin and wickednefs can never make us evil, fo long as it is outfide of us; that is, fo long as we do not commit it, or do not give confent to it.]

Therefore although it be good and profitable that we fhould afk, and learn and know, what good and holy men have wrought and fuffered, and how God hath dealt with them, and what he hath wrought in and through them, yet it were a thoufand times better that we fhould in ourfelves learn and perceive and underftand, who we are, how and what our own life is, what God is and is doing in us, what he will have from us, and to what ends he will or will not make use of us. [For, of a truth, thoroughly to know onefelf, is above all art, for it is the higheft art. If thou knowest thyself well, thou art better and more praiseworthy before God, than if thou didst not know thyself, but didft understand the course of the heavens and of all the planets and stars, alfo the virtue of all herbs, and the ftructure and dispositions of all mankind, alfo the nature of all beafts, and, in fuch matters, hadst all the skill of all who are in heaven and on earth. For it is faid, there came a voice from heaven, faying, "Man, know thyfelf."] Thus that proverb is still true, " going out were never fo good, but staying at home were much better."

Further, ye fhould learn that eternal bleffednefs lieth in one thing alone, and in nought elfe. And if ever man or the foul is to be made bleffed, that one thing alone muft be in the foul. Now fome might afk, "But what is that one thing?" I anfwer, it is Goodnefs, or that which hath been made good, and yet neither this good nor that, which we can name, or perceive or fhow; but it is all and above all good things.

Moreover, it needeth not to enter into the foul, for it is there already, only it is unperceived. When we fay we should come unto it, we mean that we should feek it, feel it, and taste it. And now fince it is One, unity and fingleness is better than manifoldness. For bleffednefs lieth not in much and many, but in One and onenefs. In one word, bleffednefs lieth not in any creature, or work of the creatures, but it lieth alone in God and in his works. Therefore I must wait only on God and his work, and leave on one fide all creatures with their works, and first of all myfelf. In like manner all the great works and wonders that God has ever wrought or shall ever work in or through the creatures, or even God himself with all his goodness, so far as these things exist or are done outside of me, can never make me blessed, but only in so far as they exist and are done and loved, known, tasted and felt within me.

CHAP. X.

How the perfect Men have no other Defire than that they may be to the Eternal Goodness what his Hand is to a Man, and how they have lost the Fear of Hell, and Hope of Heaven.

OW let us mark: Where men are enlightened with the true light, they perceive that all which they might defire or choofe, is nothing to that which all creatures, as creatures, ever defired or chofe or knew. Therefore they renounce all defire and choice, and commit and commend themfelves and all things to the Eternal Goodnefs. Neverthelefs, there remaineth in them a defire to go forward and get nearer to the Eternal Goodness; that is, to come to a clearer knowledge, and warmer love, and more comfortable affurance, and perfect obedience and fubjection; fo that every enlightened man could fay: "I would fain be to the Eternal Goodnefs, what his own hand is to a man." And he feareth always that he is not enough fo, and longeth for the falvation of all men. And fuch men do not call this longing their own, nor take it unto themfelves, for they know well that this defire is not of man, but of the Eternal Goodnefs; for whatfoever is good shall no one take unto himself as his own, feeing that it belongeth to the Eternal Goodness only.

Moreover, these men are in a state of freedom, because they have lost the fear of pain or hell, and the hope of reward or heaven, but are living in pure fubmiflion to the Eternal Goodnefs, in the perfect freedom of fervent love. This mind was in Chrift in perfection, and is alfoin his followers, in fome more, and in fome lefs. But it is a forrow and fhame to think that the Eternal Goodnefs is ever most graciously guiding and drawing us, and we will not yield o it. What is better and nobler than true poornels in spirit? Yet when that is held up before us, we will have none of it, but are always feeking ourfelves, and our own things. [We like to have our mouths always filled with good things,] that we may have in ourfelves a lively tafte of pleafure and fweetnefs. When this is fo, we are well pleafed, and think it standeth not amifs with us. But we are yet a long way off from a perfect life. For when God will draw us up to fomething higher, that is, to an utter lofs and forfaking of our own things, fpiritual and natural, and withdraweth his comfort and fweetnefs from us, we faint and are troubled, and can in no wife bring our minds to it; and we forget God and neglect holy exercifes, and fancy we are loft for ever.] This is a great error and a bad fign. For a true lover of God, loveth him or the Eternal Goodness alike, in having, and in not having, in fweetnefs and bitternefs, in good or evil report, and the like, for he feeketh alone the honour of God, and not his own, either in fpiritual or natural things. And therefore he standeth alike unshaken in all things, at all feafons. [Hereby let every man prove himfelf, how he standeth towards God, his Creator and Lord.]

How a righteous Man in this present Time is brought into Hell, and there cannot be comforted, and how he is taken out of Hell and carried into Heaven, and there cannot be troubled.

32

HRIST'S foul muft needs defcend into hell, before it afcended into heaven. So muft alfo the foul of man. But mark ye in what manner this cometh to pafs. When a man truly perceiveth and confidereth himfelf, who and what he is, and findeth himfelf utterly vile and wicked, and unworthy of all the comfort and kindnefs that he hath ever received from God, or from the creatures, he falleth into fuch a deep abafement and defpifing of himfelf, that he thinketh himfelf unworthy that the earth should bear him, and it feemeth to him reasonable that all creatures in heaven and earth should rife up against him and avenge their Creatoron him, and should punish and torment him; and that he were unworthy even of that. And it feemeth to him that he shall be eternally loft and damned, and a footftool to all the devils in hell, and that this is right and just, [and all too little compared to his fins which he fo often and in fo many ways hath committed against God his Creator.] And therefore alfo he will not and dare not defire any confolation or release, either from God or from any creature that is in heaven or on earth; but he is willing to be unconfoled and unreleafed, and he doth not grieve over his condemnation and fufferings; for they are right and juft, and not contrary to God, but according to the will of God. Therefore they are right in his eyes, and he hath nothing to fay against them. Nothing grieveth him but his own guilt and wickednefs; for that is not right and is contrary to God, and for that caufe he is grieved and troubled in fpirit.

This is what is meant by true repentance for fin. And he who in this present time entereth into this hell, entereth afterward into the Kingdom of Heaven, and obtaineth a foretaste thereof which excelleth all the delight and joy which he ever hath had or could have in this prefent time from temporal things. But whilft a man is thus in hell, none may: confole him, neither God nor the creature, as it is written "In hell there is no redemption."* Of this state hath one faid, "Let me perish, let me die! I live without hope; from within and from without I am condemned, let no one pray that I may be releafed."

Now God hath not forfaken a man in this hell, but He is laying His * The writer is probably alluding to Ps. xlix. 8.

hand upon him, that the man may A not defires nor regard anything but the Eternal Good only, and may come to know that that is fo noble and paffing good, that none can fearch out or express its blifs, confolation and joy, peace, reft and fatisfaction. And then, when the man neither careth for, nor feeketh, nor defireth, anything but the Eternal Good alone, and feeketh not himfelf, nor his own things, but the honour of God only, he is made a partaker of all manner of joy, blifs, peace, reft and confolation, and fo the man is henceforth in the Kingdom of Heaven.

This hell and this heaven are two good, fafe ways for a man in this prefent time, and happy is he who truly findeth them: For this hell paffeth away, and the Kingdom of Heaven endureth.

Alfo let a man mark, when he is in this hell, nothing may confole him: and he cannot believe that he fhall ever?

be releafed or comforted. But when he is in heaven, nothing can trouble him; he believeth alfo that none will ever be able to offend or trouble him, albeit it is indeed true, that after this hell he may be comforted and releafed, and after this heaven he may be troubled and left without confolation.

Again: this hell and this heaven come about a man in fuch fort, that he knoweth not whence they come; and whether they come to him, or depart from him, he can of himfelf do nothing towards it. Of these things he can neither give nor take away from himfelf, bring them nor banish them, but as it is written, " The wind bloweth where it lifteth, and thou heareft the found thereof," that is to fay, at this time prefent, " but thou knoweft not whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth."* And when a man is in one of thefe two states, all is right with him, and he is as fafe in hell as in heaven,/ and fo long as a man is on earth, it is poffible for him to pafs ofttimes from the one into the other; nay even within the fpace of a day and night, and all without his own doing. But when the man is in neither of thefe two ftates he holdeth converfe with the creature, and wavereth hither and thither, and knoweth not what manner of man he is. Therefore he fhall never forget either of them, but lay up the remembrance of them in his heart.

CHAP. XII.

Touching that true inward Peace, which Chrift left to his Disciples at the last.

ANY fay they have no peace nor reft, but fo many croffes and trials, afflictions and forrows, that they know not how they shall ever get through them. Now he who in truth will perceive and take note, perceiveth clearly, that true peace and reft lie not in outward things; for if it were fo, the Evil Spirit alfo would have peace when things go according to his will, [which is nowife the cafe; for the prophet declareth " There is no peace, faith my God, to the wicked."*] And therefore we must confider and fee what is that peace which Chrift left to his disciples at the last, when he faid : "My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." + [We may perceive that in these words Christ did not mean a bodily and outward peace; for his beloved disciples, with all his friends and followers, have ever fuffered, from the beginning, great affliction, perfecution, nay, often martyrdom, as Chrift himfelf faid: "In this world ye shall have tribulation." # But Chrift meant that true, inward peace of the heart,

* Ifaiah lvii. 21. + John xiv. 27.

which beginneth here, and endureth for ever hereafter. Therefore he faid]: "not as the world giveth," for the world is falfe, and deceiveth in her gifts; [she promiseth much, and performeth little. Moreover there liveth no man on earth who may always have rest and peace without troubles and croffes, with whom things always go according to his will; there is always fomething to be fuffered here, turn which way you will. And as foon as you are quit of one affault, perhaps two come in its place. Wherefore yield thyfelf willingly to them, and feek only that true peace of the heart, which none can take away from thee, that thou mayeft overcome all affaults.]

Thus then, Chrift meant that inward peace which can break through all affaults and croffes of oppreffion, fuffering, mifery, humiliation and what more there may be of the like, fo that a man may be joyful and patient therein, like the beloved difciples and followers of Chrift. Now he who will in love give his whole diligence and might thereto, will verily come to know that true eternal peace which is God Himfelf, as far as it is poffible to a creature; [infomuch that what was bitter to him before, fhall become fweet, and his heart fhall remain unmoved under all changes, at all times, and after this life, he fhall attain unto everlafting peace.]

CHAP. XIII.

How a Man may caft afide Images too foon.

AULER faith: "there befome men at the prefent time, who take leave of types and fymbols too foon, before they have drawn out all the truth and inftruction contained therein." Hence they are fcarcely or perhaps never able to understand the truth aright.* [For fuch men will follow no one, and lean unto their own understandings, and defire to fly before they are fledged. They would fain mount up to heaven in one flight; albeit Chrift did not fo, for after his refurrection, he remained full forty days with his beloved disciples. No one can be made perfect in a day. A man must begin by denying himself, and willingly forfaking all things for God's fake, and must give up his own will, and all his natural inclinations, and feparate and cleanfe himfelf thoroughly from all fins and evil ways. After this, let him humbly take up the crofs and follow Chrift. Alfo let him take and receive example and inftruction, reproof, counfel and teaching from devout and perfect fervants of God, and not follow his own guidance. Thus the work fhall be eftablifhed and come to a good end. And when a man hath thus broken loofe from and outleaped all temporal things and creatures, he may afterwards become perfect in a life of contemplation. For he who will have the one muft let the other go. There is no other way.]

CHAP. XIV.

Of three Stages by which a Man is led upwards till he attaineth true Perfection.

OW be affured that no one can be enlightened unlefs he be first cleansed or purified and ftripped. So alfo, no one can be united with God unlefs he be first enlightened. Thus there are three stages: first, the purification; secondly, the enlightening; thirdly, the union. [The purification concerneth those who are beginning or repenting, and is brought to pass in a threefold wife; by contrition and forrow for fin, by full confeffion, by hearty amendment. The enlightening belongeth to fuch as are growing, and alfo taketh place in three ways: to wit, by the eschewal of fin, by the practice of virtue and good works, and by the willing endurance of all manner of temptation and trials. The union belongeth to fuch as are perfect, and alfo is brought to pass in three ways: to wit, by purenefs and finglenefs of heart, by love, and by the contemplation of God, the Creator of all things.]

CHAP. XV.

How all Men are dead in Adam and are made alive again in Christ, and of true Obedience and Disobedience.

LL that in Adam fell and died, was raifed again and made alive in Chrift, and all that rofe up and was made alive in Adam, fell and died in Chrift. But what was that? I anfwer, true obedience and difobedience. But what is true obedience? I anfwer, that a man fhould fo ftand free, being quit of himfelf, that is, of his I, and Me, and Self, and Mine, and the like, that in all things, he fhould no more feek or regard himfelf, than if he did not exift, and fhould take as little account of himfelf as if he were not, and another had done all his works. Likewife he fhould count all the creatures for nothing. What is there then, which is, and which we may count for fomewhat? I anfwer, nothing but that which we may call God. Behold! this is very obedience in the truth, and thus it will be in a bleffed eternity. There nothing is fought nor thought of, nor loved, but the one thing only.

Hereby we may mark what difobedience is: to wit, that a man maketh fome account of himfelf, and thinketh that he is, and knoweth, and can do fomewhat, and feeketh himfelf and his own ends in the things around him, and hath regard to and loveth himfelf, and the like. Man is created for true obedience, and is bound of right to render it to God. And this obedience fell and died in Adam, and rofe again and lived in Christ. Yea, Christ's human nature was fo utterly bereft of Self, and apart from all creatures, as no man's ever was, and was nothing elfe but " a houfe and habitation of God." Neither of that in him which belonged to God, nor of that which was a living human nature and a habitation of God, did he, as man, claim any thing for his own. His human nature did not even take unto itself the Godhead. whofe dwelling it was, nor any thing that this fame Godhead willed, or did or left undone in him, nor yet any thing of all that his human nature did or fuffered; but in Chrift's human nature there was no claiming of any thing, nor feeking nor defire, faving that what was due might be rendered to the Godhead, and he did not call this very defire his own. Of this matter no more can be faid or written here, for it is unspeakable, and was never yet and never will be fully uttered; for it can neither be fpoken nor written but by Him who is and knows its ground; that is, God Himfelf, who can do all things well.

CHAP. XVI.

Telleth us what is the old Man, and what is the new Man.

GAIN, when we read of the A old man and the new man we must mark what that meaneth. The old man is Adam and disobedience, the Self, the Me, and fo forth. But the new man is Chrift and true obedience, [a giving up and denying onefelf of all temporal things, and feeking the honour of God alone in all things.] And when dying and perishing and the like are spoken of, it meaneth that the old man should be destroyed, and not seek its own either in fpiritual or in natural things. For where this is brought about in a true divine light, there the new man is born again. In like manner, it hath been faid that man fhould die unto himfelf, [that is, to earthly pleafures, confolations, joys, appetites, the I, the Self, and all that is thereof in man, to which he clingeth and on which he is yet leaning with content, and thinketh much of. Whether it be the man himfelf, or any other creature, whatever it be, it must depart and die, if the man is to be brought aright to another mind, according to the truth.]

Thereunto doth St. Paul exhort us, faying: "Put off concerning the former converfation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lufts: . . . and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteoufnefs and true holinefs."* Now he who liveth to himfelf after the old man, is called and is truly a child of Adam; and though he may give diligence to the ordering of his life, he is ftill the child and brother of the Evil Spirit. But he who liveth in humble obedience and in the new man which is Chrift, he is, in like manner, the brother of Chrift and the child of God.

Behold! where the old man dieth and the new man is born, there is that fecond birth of which Chrift faith, " Except a man be born again, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."* Likewife St. Paul faith; "As in Adam all die, even fo in Chrift shall all be made alive." That is to fay, all who follow Adam in pride, in lust of the flesh, and in disobedience, are dead in foul, and never will or can be made alive but in Chrift. And for this caufe, fo long as a man is an Adam or his child, he is without God. Chrift faith, "he who is not with me is against me."[‡] Now he who is against God, is dead before God. Whence it followeth that all Adam's children are dead before God. But he who ftandeth with Chrift in perfect obedience, he is with God and liveth. As it hath been faid already, fin lieth in the turning away of the creature from the Creator, which agreeth with what we have now faid.

For he who is in difobedience is in fin, and fin can never be atoned for or healed but by returning to God, and this is brought to pass by humble obedience. For fo long as a man continueth in disobedience, his fin can never be blotted out; let him do what he will, it availeth him nothing. Let us be affured of this. For disobedience is itfelf fin. But when a man entereth into the obedience of the faith, all is healed, and blotted out and forgiven, and not elfe. Infomuch that if the Evil Spirit himfelf could come into true obedience, he would become an angel again, and all his fin and wicked-nefs would be healed and blotted out and forgiven at once. And could an angel fall into difobedience, he would ftraightway become an evil fpirit although he did nothing afrefh.

If then it were poffible for a man to renounce himfelf and all things, and to live as wholly and purely in true obedience, as Christ did in his human nature, fuch a man were quite without fin, and were one thing with Chrift, and the fame by grace which Chrift was by nature. But it is faid this cannot be. So alfo it is faid : " there is none without fin." But be that as it may, this much is certain; that the nearer we are to perfect obedience, the lefs we fin, and the farther from it we are, the more we fin. In brief: whether a man be good, better, or best of all; bad, worfe, or worft of all; finful or faved before God; it all lieth in this matter of obedience. Therefore it hath been faid : the more of Self and Me, the more of fin and wickednefs. So likewife it hath been faid: the more the Self, the I, the Me, the Mine, that is, felffeeking and felfifhnefs abate in a man, the more doth God's I, that is, God Himfelf, increafe in him.

Now, if all mankind abode in true obedience, there would be no grief nor forrow. For if it were fo, all men would be at one, and none would vex or harm another; fo alfo, none would lead a life or do any deed contrary to God's will. Whence then fhould grief or forrow arife? But now alas! all men, nay the whole world lieth in difobedience! Now were a man fimply and wholly obedient as Chrift was, all difobedience were to him a fharp and bitter pain. But though all men were against him, they could neither shake nor trouble him, for while in this obedience a man were one with God, and God Himfelf were [one with] the man. Behold now all disobedience is contrary to God, and nothing elfe. In truth, no Thing is contrary to God; no creature nor creature's work, nor any thing that we can name or think of is contrary to God or difpleafing to Him, but only difobedience and the difobedient man. In short, all that is, is well-pleafing and good in God's eyes, faving only the difobedient man. But he is fo difpleafing and hateful to God and grieveth Him fo fore, that if it were poffible for human nature to die a hundred deaths, God would willingly fuffer them all for one disobedient man, that He might flay difobedience in him, and that obedience might be born again.

Behold! albeit no man may be fo fingle and perfect in this obedience as Chrift was, yet it is poffible to every man to approach fo near thereunto as to be rightly called godlike, and "a partaker of the divine nature."* And the nearer a man cometh thereunto, and the more godlike and divine he becometh, the more he hateth all difobedience, fin, evil and unrighteoufnefs, and the worfe they grieve him. Difobedience and fin are the fame thing, for there is no fin but difobedience, and what is done of difobedience is all fin. Therefore all we have to do is to keep ourfelves from difobedience.

CHAP. XVII.

How we are not to take unto ourfelves what we have done well, but only what we have done amis.

EHOLD! now it is reported there be fome who vainly think and fay that they are fo wholly dead to felf and quit of it, as to have reached and abide in a ftate where they fuffer nothing and are moved by nothing, juft as if all men were living in obedience, or as if there were no creatures. And thus they profefs to continue always in an even temper of mind, fo that nothing cometh amifs to them, howfoever things fall out, well or ill. Nay verily ! the matter ftandeth not fo, but as we have faid. It might be thus, if all men were brought into obedience; but until then, it cannot be.

But it may be afked: Are not we to be feparate from all things, and neither to take unto ourfelves evilnor good? I anfwer, no one fhall take goodnefs unto himfelf, for that belongeth to God and His goodnefs only; but thanks be unto the man, and everlafting reward and bleffings, who is fit and ready to be a dwelling and tabernacle of the Eternal Goodnefs and Godhead, wherein God may exert his power, and will and work without hindrance. But if any now will excufe himfelf for fin, by refufing to take what is evil unto himfelf, and laying the guilt thereof upon the Evil Spirit, and thus make himfelf out to be quite pure and innocent (as our first parents Adam and Eve did while they were yet in paradife; when each laid the guilt upon the other), he hath no right at all to do this; for it is written, " there is none without fin." Therefore I fay; reproach, fhame, lofs, woe, and eternal damnation be to the man who is fit and ready and willing that the Evil Spirit and falsehood, lies and all untruthfulnefs, wickednefs and other evil things fhould have their will and pleafure, word and work in him, and make him their house and habitation.

CHAP. XVIII.

How that the Life of Christ is the noblest and best Life that ever hath been or can be, and how a careless Life of false Freedom is the worst Life that can be.

F a truth we ought to know and believe that there is no life fo noble and good and well pleafing to God, as the life of Chrift, and yet it is to nature and felfishness the bitterest life. A life of careleffnefs and freedom is to nature and the Self and the Me, the fweetest and pleafantest life, but it is not the best; and in fome men may become the worft. But though Christ's life be the most bitter of all, yet it is to be preferred above all. Hereby shall ye mark this: There is an inward fight which hath power to perceive the One true Good, and that it is neither this nor that, but that of which St. Paul faith; "when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."* By this he meaneth, that the Whole and Perfect excelleth all the fragments, and that all which is in part and imperfect, is as nought compared to the Perfect. Thus likewife all knowledge of the parts is fwallowed up when the Whole is known; and where that Good is known, it cannot but be longed for and loved fo greatly, that all other love wherewith the man hath loved himfelf and other things, fadeth away. And that inward fight likewife perceiveth what is best and noblest in all things, and loveth it in the one true Good, and only for the fake of that true Good.

Behold! where there is this inward fight, the man perceiveth of a truth, that Christ's life is the best and noblest life, and therefore the most to be preferred, and he willingly accepteth and endureth it, without a queftion or a complaint, whether it pleafe or offend nature or other men, whether he like or diflike it, find it fweet or bitter and the like. And therefore wherever this perfect and true Good is known, there alfo the life of Chrift muft be led, until the death of the body. And he who vainly thinketh otherwife is deceived, and he who faith otherwife, lieth, and in what man the life of Chrift is not, of him the true Good and eternal Truth will nevermore be known.

* 1 Cor. xiii. 10.

CHAP. XIX.

How we cannot come to the true Light and Christ's Life, by much Questioning or Reading, or by high natural Skill and Reason, but by truly renouncing ourselves and all Things.

ET no one suppose, that we may attain to this true light and perfect knowledge, or life of Chrift, by much queftioning, or by hearfay, or by reading and ftudy, nor yet by high fkill and great learning. Yea fo long as a man taketh account of anything which is this or that, whether it be himfelf, or any other creature; or doeth anything, or frameth a purpofe, for the fake of hisownlikings or defires, or opinions, or ends, he cometh not unto the life of Chrift. This hath Chrift himfelf declared, for he faith: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himfelf, and take up his crofs, and follow me."* " He that taketh not his crofs, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." + And if he " hate not his father and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren and fifters, yea, and his own life alfo, he cannot be my disciple." He meaneth it thus: "he who doth not forfake and part with every thing, can never know my eternal truth, nor attain unto my life." And though this had never been declared unto us, yet the truth herfelf fayeth it, for it is fo of a truth. But fo long as a man clingeth unto the elements and fragments of this world (and above all to himfelf), and holdeth converse with them, and maketh great account of them, he is deceived and blinded, and perceiveth what is good no further than as it is most convenient and pleafant to himfelf and profitable to his own ends. These he holdeth to be the higheft good and loveth above all. [Thus he never cometh to the truth.]

CHAP. XX.

How, seeing that the Life of Christ is most bitter to Nature and Self, Nature will have none of it, and chooseth a false careless Life, as is most convenient to her.

OW, fince the life of Chrift is every way most bitter to nature and the Self and the Me (for in the true life of Chrift, the Self and the Me and nature must be forfaken and loft, and die altogether), therefore, in each of us, nature hath a horror of it, and thinketh it evil and unjust and a folly, and graspeth after fuch a life as shall be most comfortable and pleafant to herfelf, and faith, and believeth also in her blindness, that such a life is the best possible. Now, nothing is fo comfortable and pleafant to nature, as a free, careless way of life, therefore she clingeth to that, and taketh enjoyment in herfelf and her own powers, and looketh only to her own peace and comfort and the like. And this happeneth most of all, where there are high natural gifts of reafon, for that foareth upwards in its own light and by its own power, till at last it cometh to think itself the true Eternal Light, and giveth itself out as such, and is thus deceived in itfelf, and deceiveth other people along with it, who. know no better, and alfo are thereunto inclined.

CHAP. XXI.

How a Friend of Christ willingly fulfilleth by his outward Works, such Things as must be and ought to be, and doth not concern himself with the rest.

OW, it may be afked, what is the flate of a man who followeth the true Light to the utmost of his power? I answer truly, it will never be declared aright, for he who is not fuch a man, can neither understand nor know it, and he who is, knoweth it indeed; but he cannot utter it, for it is unspeakable. Therefore let him who would know it, give his whole diligence that he may enter therein; then will he see and find what hath never been uttered by man's lips. However, I believe that such a man hath liberty as to his outward walk and conversation, fo long as they consist with what must be or ought to be; but they may not confift with what he merely willeth to be. But oftentimes a man maketh to himfelf many must-be's and ought-to-be's which are falfe. The which ye may fee hereby, that when a man is moved by his pride or covetousness or other evil dispositions, to do or leave undone anything, he ofttimes faith, "It must needs be so, and ought to be fo." Or if he is driven to, or held back from anything by the defire to find favour in men's eyes, or by love, friendship, enmity, or the lusts and appetites of his body, he faith, "It must needs be fo, and ought to be fo." Yet behold, that is utterly falfe. Had we no must-be's, nor ought-to-be's, but fuch as God and the Truth show us, and constrain us to, we should have lefs, forfooth, to order and do than now; for we make to ourfelves much difquietude and difficulty which we might well be fpared and raifed above.]

CHAP. XXII.

How fometimes the Spirit of God, and fometimes alfo the Evil Spirit may poffefs a Man and have the mastery over him.

T is written that fometimes the Devil and his fpirit do fo enter into and posses a man, that he knoweth not what he doeth and leaveth undone, and hath no power over himfelf, but the Evil Spirit hath the maftery over him, and doeth and leaveth undone in, and with, and through, and by the man what he will. It is true in a fenfe that all the world is fubject to and poffeffed with the Evil Spirit, that is, with lies, falfehood, and other vices and evil ways; this alfo cometh of the Evil Spirit, but in a different fenfe.

Now, a man who should be in like manner possefied by the Spirit of God, fo that he should not know what he doeth or leaveth undone, and have no power over himfelf, but the will and Spirit of God should have the mastery over him, and work, and do, and leave undone with him and by him, what and as God would; fuch a man were one of those of whom St. Paul faith : "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the fons of God,"* and they "are not under the law but under grace," - and to whom Chrift faith : "For it is not ye that fpeak, but the Spirit of your Father which fpeaketh in you.":

But I fear that for one who is truly poffeffed with the Spirit of God, there are a hundred thousand or an innumerable multitude poffeffed with the Evil Spirit. This is because men have more likeness to the Evil Spirit than to God. For the Self, the I, the Me and the like, all belong to the Evil Spirit, and therefore it is, that he is an Evil Spirit. Behold one or two words can utter all that hath been faid by thefe many words: "Be fimply and wholly bereft of Self." But by thefe many words, the matter hath been more fully fifted, proved, and fet forth.

Now men fay, "I am in no wife prepared for this work, and therefore it cannot be wrought in me," and thus they find an excuse, so that they neither are ready nor in the way to be fo. And truly there is no one to blame for this but themselves. For if a man were looking and striving after nothing but to find a preparation in all things, and diligently gave his whole mind to fee how he might become prepared; verily God would well prepare him, for God giveth as much care and earnestness and love to the preparing of a man, as to the pouring in of His Spirit when the man is prepared.

Yet there be certain means thereunto. as the faying is, " to learn an art which thou knoweft not, four things are needful."* The first and most needful of all is, a great defire and diligence and constant endeavour to learn the art. And where this is wanting, the art will never be learned. The fecond is, a copy or enfample by which thou mayeft learn. The third is to give earnest heed to the master, and watch how he worketh, and to be obedient to him in all things, and to truft him and follow him. The fourth is to put thy own hand to the work, and practife it with all industry. But where one of these four is wanting, the art will never be learned and maftered. So likewife is it with this preparation. For he who hath the first, that is, thorough diligence and constant, perfevering defire towards his end, will alfo feek and find all that appertaineth thereunto, or is ferviceable and profitable to it. But he who hath not that earneftnefs and diligence, love and defire, feeketh not, and therefore findeth not, and therefore remaineth ever unprepared. And therefore he never attaineth unto that end.

CHAP. XXIII.

He who will fubmit himfelf to God and be obedient to Him, must be ready to bear with all Things; to wit, God, himfelf, and all Creatures, and must be obedient to them all, whether he have to suffer or to do.

HERE be fome who talk of other ways and preparations to this end, and fay we must lie ftill under God's hand, and be obedient and refigned and fubmit to Him. This is true; for all this would be perfected in a man who fhould attain to the uttermost that can be reached in this prefent time. But if a man ought and is 1 willing to lie still under God's hand, he must and ought also to be still under all things, whether they come from God, himfelf, or the creatures, nothing excepted. And he who would be obedient, refigned and fubmiffive to God, must and ought to be also refigned, obedient and fubmiffive to all things, in a spirit of yielding, and not of refistance, and take them in filence, resting on the hidden foundations of his foul, and having a fecret inward patience, that enableth him to take all chances or croffes willingly, and whatever befalleth, neither to call for nor defire any redrefs, or deliverance, or refiftance, or revenge, but always in a loving, fincere humility to cry, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do !"

Behold! this were a good path to that which is Beft, and a noble and bleffed preparation for the fartheft goal which a man may reach in this prefent time. This is the lovely life of Chrift, for he walked in the aforefaid paths perfectly and wholly unto the end of his bodily life on earth. Therefore there is no other and better way or preparation to the joyful life of Jefus Chrift, than this fame courfe, and to exercife onefelf therein, as much as may be. And of what belongeth thereunto we have already faid fomewhat; nay, all that we have here or elfewhere faid and written, is but a way or means to that end. But what the end is, knoweth no man to declare. But let him who would know it, follow my counfel and take the right path thereunto, which is the humble life of Jefus Chrift; [let him strive after that with unwearied perfeverance, and fo, without doubt, he shall come to that end which endureth for ever. "For he that endureth to the end shall be faved."]*

* Matt. x. 22.

CHAP. XXIV.

How that four Things are needful before a Man can receive divine Truth and be posselfed with the Spirit of God.*

OREOVER there are yet other ways to the lovely life of Chrift, befides those we have fpoken of: to wit, that God and man should be wholly united, fo that it can be faid of a truth, that God and man are one. This cometh to pass on this wife. Where the Truth always reigneth, fo that true perfect God and true perfect man are at one, and man fo giveth

* The heading of this Chapter appears to have no relation to its contents, while it perfectly fuits the latter half of Chap. xxii. (p. 69), which has nothing corresponding to it in the heading of that chapter. As however the heading of Chap. xxiv. is common both to the Wurtzburg MS. and Luther's editions, the translator has no option but to retain it in its prefent polition.

place to God, that God Himfelf is there and yet the man too, and this fame unity worketh continually, and doeth and leaveth undone without any I, and Me, and Mine, and the like; behold, there is Chrift, and nowhere elfe. Now, feeing that here there is true perfect manhood, fo there is a perfect perceiving and feeling of pleafure and pain, liking and difliking, fweetnefs and bitternefs, joy and forrow, and all that can be perceived and felt within and without. And feeing that God is here made man, he is alfo able to perceive and feel love and hatred, evil and good and the like. As a man who is not God, feeleth and taketh note of all that giveth him pleafure and pain, and it pierceth him to the heart, especially what offendeth him; fo is it alfo when God and man are one, and yet God is the man; there everything is perceived and felt that is contrary to God and man. And fince there man becometh nought, and God alone is everything, fo is it with that which is contrary to man, and a forrow to him. And this muft hold true of God fo long as a bodily and fubftantial life endureth.

Furthermore, mark ye, that the one Being in whom God and man are united, standeth free of himfelf and of all'things, and whatever is in him is there for God's fake and not for man's, or the creature's. For it is the property of God to be without this and that, and without Self and Me, and without equal or fellow; but it is the nature and property of the creature to feek itfelf and its own things, and this and that, here and there; and in all that it doeth and leaveth undone its defire is to its own advantage and profit. Now where a creature or a man forfaketh and cometh out of himfelf and his own things, there God entereth in with His own, that is, with Himfelf.

CHAP. XXV.

Of two evil Fruits that do spring up from the Seed of the Evil Spirit, and are two Sifters who love to dwell together. The one is called spiritual Pride and Highmindedness, the other is falle, lawless Freedom.

OW, after that a man hath walked in all the ways that lead him unto the truth, and exercifed himfelf therein, not fparing his labour; now, as often and as long as he dreameth that his work is altogether finished, and he is by this time quite dead to the world, and come out from Self and given up to God alone, behold! the Devil cometh and foweth his feed in the man's heart. From this feed fpring two fruits; the one is fpiritual fulness or pride, the other is false, lawless freedom. These are two fifters who love to be together. Now, it beginneth on this wife : the Devil 1 puffeth up the man, till he thinketh himfelf to have climbed the topmost pinnacle, and to have come fo near to heaven, that he no longer needeth Scripture, nor teaching, nor this nor that, but is altogether raifed above any need. Whereupon there arifeth a falfe peace and fatisfaction with himfelf, and then it followeth that he faith or thinketh : "Yea, now I am above all other men, and know and understand more than any one in the world; therefore it is certainly just and reasonable that I should be the lord and commander of all creatures, and that all creatures, and especially all men, should ferve me and be fubject unto me." And then he feeketh and defireth the fame, and taketh it gladly from all creatures, especially men, and thinketh himself well worthy of all this, and that it is his due, and looketh on men as if they were the beafts of the field, and thinketh himfelf worthy of all that ministereth to his body and life and nature, in profit, or joy, or pleasure, or even pastime and amusement, and he feeketh and taketh it wherever he findeth opportunity. And whatever is done or can be done for him, feemeth him all too little and too poor, for he thinketh himfelf worthy of still more and greater honour than can be rendered to him. And of all the men who ferve him and are fubject to him, even if they be downright thieves and murderers, he faith neverthelefs, that they have faithful, noble hearts, and have great love and faithfulnefs to the truth and to poor men. And fuch men are praifed by him, and he feeketh them and followeth after them wherever they be. But he who doth not order himfelf according to the will of these highminded men, nor is subject unto them, is not sought after by them, nay, more likely blamed and fpoken ill of, even though he were as holy as St. Peter himfelf. And feeing that this proud and puffed-up fpirit thinketh that fhe needeth neither Scripture, nor inftruction, nor anything of the kind, therefore fhe giveth no heed to the admonitions, order, laws and precepts of the holy Chriftian Church, nor to the Sacraments, but mocketh at them and at all men who walk according to thefe ordinances and hold them in reverence. Hereby we may plainly fee that thofe two fifters dwell together.

Moreover fince this fheer pride thinketh to know and underftand more than all men befides, therefore fhe choofeth to prate more than all other men, and would fain have her opinions and fpeeches to be alone regarded and liftened to, and counteth all that others think and fay to be wrong, and holdeth it in derifion as a folly.

CHAP. XXVI.

Touching Poornefs of Spirit and true Humility, and whereby we may difern the true and lawful free Men, whom the Truth hath made free.

UT it is quite otherwife where there is poornefs of fpirit, and true humility; and it is fo becaufe it is found and known of a truth that a man, of himfelf and his own power, is nothing, hath nothing, can do and is capable of nothing but only infirmity and evil. Hence followeth that the man findeth himfelf altogether unworthy of all that hath been or ever will be done for him, by God or the creatures, and that he is a debtor to God and alfo to all the creatures in God's ftead, both to bear with, and to labour for, and to ferve them. And therefore he doth not in any wife stand up for his own rights, but from the humility of his heart he faith, " It is just and reafonable that God and all creatures should be against me, and have a right over me, and to me, and that I should not be against any one, nor have a right to any thing." Hence it followeth that the man doth not and will not crave or beg for any thing, either from God or the creatures, beyond mere needful things, and for those only with shamefacedness, as a favour and not as a right. And he will not minister unto or gratify his body or any of his natural defires, beyond what is needful, nor allow that any fhould help or ferve him except in . cafe of neceffity, and then always in trembling; for he hath no right to any thing and therefore he thinketh himfelf unworthy of any thing. So likewife all his own difcourfe, ways, words and works feem to this man a thing of nought and a folly. Therefore he fpeaketh little, and doth not take upon himfelf to admonifh or rebuke any, unlefs he be conftrained thereto by love or faithfulnefs towards God, and even then he doth it in fear, and fo little as may be.

Moreover, when a man hath this poor and humble spirit, he cometh to see and understand aright, how that all men are bent upon themfelves, and inclined to evil and fin, and that on this account it is needful and profitable that there be order, cuftoms, law and precepts, to the end that the blindness and foolishness of men may be corrected, and that vice and wickedness may be kept under, and conftrained to feemlinefs. For without ordinances, men would be much more mischievous and ungovernable than dogs and cattle. And few have come to the knowledge of the truth, but what have begun with holy practices and ordinances, and exercifed themfelves therein fo long as they knew nothing more nor better.

Therefore one who is poor in fpirit and of a humble mind doth not defpife or make light of law, order, precepts and holy cuftoms, nor yet of thofe who obferve and cleave wholly to them, but with loving pity and gentle forrow, crieth: "Almighty Father, Thou Eternal Truth, I make my lament unto Thee, and it grieveth Thy Spirit too, that through man's blindnefs, infirmity, and fin, that is made needful and muft be, which in deed and truth were neither needful nor right." [For thofe who are perfect are under no law.

So order, laws, precepts and the like are merely an admonition to men who underftand nothing better and know and perceive not wherefore all law and order is ordained.] And the perfect accept the law along with fuch ignorant men as underftand and know nothing better, and practife it with them, to the intent that they may be reftrained thereby, and kept from evil ways, or if it be poffible, brought to fomething higher.

Behold! all that we have faid of poverty and humility is fo of a truth, and we have the proof and witnefs thereof in the pure life of Chrift, and in his words. For he both practifed and fulfilled every work of true humility and all other virtues, as thineth forth in his holy life, and he faith alfo exprefly: " Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart and ye shall find reft unto your fouls."* Moreover he did not defpife and fet at nought the law and the commandments, nor yet the men who are under the law. [He faith : " I am not come to deftroy the law or the prophets but to fulfil."] But he faith further, that to keep them is not enough, we must press forward to what is higher and better, as is indeed true. [He faith : " Except your righteoufnefs shall exceed the righteoufnefs of the Scribes and Pharifees, ye shall in no cafe enter into the kingdom of Heaven."* For the law forbiddeth evil works, but Chrift condemneth alfo evil thoughts; the law alloweth us to take vengeance on our enemies, but Chrift commandeth us to love them. The law forbiddeth not the good things of this world, but he counfelleth us to despise them. An d he hath set his feal upon all he faid, with his own holy life; for he taught nothing that he did not fulfil in work, and he kept the law and was subject unto it to the end of his mortal life.] Likewife St. Paul faith: " Chrift was made under the law to redeem them that were under the law."+ That is, that he might bring them to fomething higher and nearer . to himfelf. He faid again, " The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister." ‡ words and works, we find nothing but true, pure humility and poverty fuch as we have fet forth. And therefore where God dwelleth in a man, and the man is a true follower of Chrift, it will be, and must be, and ought to be the fame. But where there is pride, and a haughty spirit, and a light careless mind, Chrift is not, nor any true follower of his.

Chrift faid: "my foul is troubled, even unto death." He meaneth his bodily death. [That is to fay: from the time that he was born of Mary, until his death on the crofs, he had not one joyful day, but only trouble, forrow and contradiction.] Therefore it is just and reasonable that his fervants should be even as their Master. Chrift faith also: "Bleffed are the poor in spirit," (that is, those who are truly humble) "for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven." And thus we find it of a truth, where God is made man. For in Chrift and in all his true followers, there muft needs be thorough humility and poornefs of fpirit, a lowly retiring difpofition, and a heart laden with a fecret forrow and mourning, fo long as this mortal life lafteth. And he who dreameth otherwife is deceived, and deceiveth others with him as aforefaid. Therefore nature and Self always avoid this life, and cling to a life of falfe freedom and eafe as we have faid.

Behold! now cometh an Adam or an Evil Spirit, withing to juftify himfelf and make excufe, and faith; "Thou wilt almost have it that Christ was bereft of felf and the like, yet he spake often of himself, and glorified himself in this and that." Answer: when a man in whom the truth worketh, hath and ought to have a will towards any thing, his will and endeavour and works are for no end, but that the truth may be seen and manifested; and this will was in Chrift, and to this end, words and works are needful. And what Chrift did becaufe it was the most profitable and best means thereunto, he no more took unto himfelf than any thing elfe that happened. Doft thou fay now: " Then there was a Wherefore in Chrift?" I anfwer, if thou wert to ask the fun, "why shinest thou?" he would fay : " I must shine, and cannot do otherwife, for it is my nature and property; but this my property, and the light I give, is not of myfelf, and I do not call it mine." So likewife is it with God and Chrift and all who are godly and belong unto God. In them is no willing, nor working nor defiring but has for its end, goodnefs as goodnefs, for the fake of goodnefs, and they have no other Wherefore than this.

CHAP. XXVII.

How we are to take Christ's Words when he bade us forfake all Things; and wherein the Union with the Divine Will standeth.

OW, according to what hath been faid, ye must observe that when we fay, as Chrift alfo faith, that we ought to refign and forfake all things, this is not to be taken in the fenfe that a man is neither to do nor to purpofe any thing; for a man must always have fomething to do and to order fo long as he liveth. But we are to understand by it that the union with God standeth not in any man's powers, in his working or abstaining, perceiving or knowing, nor in that of all the creatures taken together.

Now what is this union? It is that we should be of a truth purely, fimply, and wholly at one with the One Eternal Will of God, or altogether without will, fo that the created will should flow out into the Eternal Will, and be fwallowed up and loft therein, fo that the Eternal Will alone should do and leave undone in us. Now mark what may help or further us towards this end. Behold, neither exercifes, nor words, nor works, nor any creature nor creature's work can do this. In this wife therefore must we renounce and forfake all things, that we must not imagine or fuppose that any words, works, or exercifes, any fkill or cunning or any created thing can help or ferve us thereto. Therefore we must fuffer these things to be what they are, and enter into the union with God. Yet outward things must be, and we must do and refrain so far as is neceffary, efpecially we must fleep and wake, walk and stand still, speak and be filent and much more of the like. These must go on so long as we live.

CHAP. XXVIII.

How, after a Union with the divine Will, the inward Man standetb immoveable, the while the outward Man is moved hither and thither.

OW, when this union truly cometh to pass and becometh established, the inward man ftandeth henceforward immoveable in this union; and God fuffereth the outward man to be moved hither and thither, from this to that, of fuch things as are neceffary and right. So that the outward man faith in fincerity, "I have no will to be or not to be, to live or die, to know or not to know, to do or to leave undone and the like; but I am ready for all that is to be, or ought to be, and obedient thereunto, whether I have to do or to fuffer." And thus the outward man hath no Wherefore or purpose, but only to do his part to further the Eternal Will. For it is perceived of a truth, that the inward man shall stand immoveable, and that it is needful for the outward man to be moved. And if the inward man have any Wherefore in the actions of the outward man, he faith only that fuch things must be and ought to be, as are ordained by the Eternal Will. And where God Himfelf dwelleth in the man, it is thus; as we plainly fee in Chrift. Moreover, where there is this union, which is the offspring of a Divine light and dwelleth in its beams, there is no fpiritual pride, or irreverent fpirit, but boundless humility, and a lowly broken heart; also an honest blameless walk, justice, peace, content and all that is of virtue must needs be there. Where they are not, there is no right union, as we have faid. For just as neither this thing nor that can bring about or further this union, fo there is nothing which hath power to frustrate or hinder it, fave the man himfelf with his felf-will, that doeth him this great wrong. Of this be well affured.

CHAP. XXIX.

How a Man may not attain fo high before Death as not to be moved or touched by outward Things.

HERE be fome who affirm, that a man, while in this prefent time, may and ought to be above being touched by outward things, and in all refpects as Chrift was after his refurrection. This they try to prove and eftablish by Chrift's words, "I go before you into Galilee, there shall ye fee me."* And again, "A fpirit hath not flesh and bones as ve fee me have." + These fayings they interpret thus : " As ye have feen me, and been followers of me, in my mortal body and life, fo alfo it behoveth you to fee me and follow me, as I go before you into Galilee; that is to fay, into a state in which nothing hath power to move or grieve the foul; on which state ye shall enter, and live and continue therein, before that ye have fuffered and gone through your bodily death. And as ye fee me having flefh and bones, and not liable to fuffer, fo shall ye likewife, while yet in the body and having your mortal nature, ceafe to feel outward things, were it even the death of the body."

Now, I anfwer, in the first place, to this affirmation, that Christ did not mean that a man should or could attain unto this state, unless he have first gone through and fuffered all that Chrift did. Now, Chrift did not attain thereunto, before he had paffed through and fuffered his natural death, and what things appertain thereto. Therefore no man can or ought to come to it fo long as he is mortal and liable to fuffer. For if fuch a state were the noblest and beft, and if it were poffible and right to attain to it, as aforefaid, in this prefent time, then it would have been attained by Chrift; for the life of Chrift is the beft and nobleft, the worthieft and lovelieft in God's fight that ever was or will be. Therefore if it was not and could not be fo with Chrift, it will never be fo with any man. Therefore though fome may imagine and fay that fuch a life is the best and noblest life, yet it is not fo.

* Matt. xxvi. 32, and xxviii. 7-10.

+ Luke xxiv. 39.

CHAP. XXX.

On what wife we may come to be beyond and above all Custom, Order, Law, Precepts and the like.

OME fay further, that we can and ought to get beyond all virtue, all cuftom and order, all law, precepts and feemlinefs, fo that all thefe fhould be laid afide, thrown off and fet at nought. Herein there is fome truth, and fome falfehood. Behold and mark : Chrift was greater than hisown life, and above all virtue, cuftom, ordinances and the like, and fo alfo is the Evil Spirit above them, but with a difference. For Chrift was and is above them on this wife, that his words, and works, and ways, his doings and refrainings, his fpeech and filence, his fufferings, and whatfoever happened to him, were not forced upon him, neither did he need them, neither were they of any profit to himfelf. It was and is the fame with all manner of virtue, order, laws, decency, and the like; for all that may be reached by them is already in Chrift to perfection. In this fenfe, that faying of St. Paul is true and receiveth its fulfilment, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the fons of God," " and are not under the law but under grace."* That meaneth, man need not teach them what they are to do or abstain from; for their Master, that is, the Spirit of God, shall verily teach them what is needful for them to know. Likewife they do not need that men should give them precepts, or command them to do right and not to do wrong, and the like; for the fame admirable Mafter who teacheth them what is good or not good, what is higher and lower, and in fhort leadeth them into all truth, He reigneth alfo within them, and biddeth them to hold fast that which is good, and to let the reft go, and to Him they give ear. Behold! in this fenfe they need not to wait upon any law, either to teach or to command them. In another fense also they need no law; namely, in order to feek or win fomething thereby or get any advantage for themfelves. For whatever help toward eternal life, or furtherance in the way everlasting they might obtain from the aid, or counfel, or words, or works of any creature, they poffefs already beforehand. Behold! in this fenfe alfo it is true, that we may rife above all law and virtue, and alfo above the works and knowledge and powers of any creature.

CHAP. XXXI.

How we are not to cast off the Life of Christ, but practife it diligently, and walk in it until Death.

UT that other thing which they affirm, how that we ought to throw off and caft afide the life of Chrift, and all laws and commandments, cuftoms and order and the like, and pay no heed to them, but despise and make light of them, is altogether falfe and a lie. Now fome may fay; -"fince neither Chrift nor others can ever gain anything, either by a Chriftian life, or by all thefe exercifes and ordinances, and the like, nor turn them to any account, feeing that they poffefs already all that can be had through them, what caufe is there why they fhould not henceforth efchew them altogether ? Must they still retain and practife them ?"

Behold, ye must look narrowly into this matter. There are two kinds of Light; the one is true and the other is falfe. The true light is that Eternal Light which is God; or elfe it is a created light, but yet divine, which is called grace. And thefe are both the true Light. So is the falfe light Nature or of Nature. But why is the first true, and the fecond falfe? This we can better perceive than fay or write. To God, as Godhead, appertain neither will, nor knowledge, nor manifestation, nor anything that we can name, or fay, or conceive. But to God as God,* it belongeth to express Himfelf, and know and love Himfelf, and to reveal Himfelf to Himfelf; and all this without any creature. And all this resteth in God as a fubstance but not as a working, fo long as there is no creature.

* That is, as a Perfon ;—"God" being ufed here as a proper name.—TR.

And out of this expreffing and revealing of Himfelf unto Himfelf, arifeth the diffinction of Perfons. But when God as God is made man, or where God dwelleth in a godly man, or one who is "made a partaker of the divine nature," in fuch a man fomewhat appertaineth unto God which is His own, and belongeth to Him only and not to the creature. And without the creature, this would lie in His own Self as a Substance or well-spring, but would not be manifested or wrought out into deeds. Now God will have it to be exercised and clothed in a form, for it is there only to be wrought out and executed. What elfe is it for? Shall it lie idle? What then would it profit? As good were it that it had never been; nay better, for what is of no use existeth in vain, and that is abhorred by God and Nature. However God will have it wrought out, and this cannot come to pass (which it ought to do), without the creature. Nay, if there ought not to be, and were not this and that—works, and a world full of real things, and the like, what were God Himfelf, and what had He to do, and whofe God would He be? Here we muft turn and ftop, or we might follow this matter and grope along until we knew not where we were, nor how we fhould find our way out again.

CHAP. XXXII.

How God is a true, fimple, perfect Good, and how He is a Light and a Reason and all Virtues, and how what is highest and best, that is, God, ought to be most loved by us.

N fhort I would have you to understand, that God (in fo far as He is good) is goodnefs as goodnefs, and not this or that good. But here mark one thing. Behold! what is fometimes here and fometimes there is not everywhere, and above all things and places; fo alfo, what is to-day, or to-morrow, is not always, at all times, and above all time; and what is fome Thing, this or that, is not all things and above all things. Now behold, if God were fome thing, this or that, he would not be all in all, and above all, as He is; and fo alfo, He would not be true Perfection. Therefore God is, and yet He is neither this nor that which the creature, as creature, can perceive, name, conceive or express. Therefore if God (in fo far as He is good) were this or that good, He would not be all good, and therefore he would not be the One Perfect Good, which He is. Now God is alfo a Light and a Reafon,* the property of which is to give light and fhine, and take knowledge; and inafmuch as God is Light and Reafon, He must give light and perceive. And all this giving and perceiving of light existeth in God without the creature; not as a work fulfilled, but as a fubftance or well-fpring. But for it to flow out into a work, fomething really done and accomplished,* there must be creatures through whom this can come to pass. Look ye: where this Reason and Light is at work in a creature, it perceiveth and knoweth and teacheth what itfelf is; how that it is good in itself and neither this thing nor that thing. This Light and Reason knoweth and teacheth men, that it is a true, fimple, perfect Good, which is neither this nor that fpecial good, but comprehendeth every kind of good.

* Cognition is the word which comes neareft to the original Erkenntnifs, but would not harmonize with the ftyle of the translation.

Now, having declared that this Light teacheth the One Good, what doth it teach concerning it? Give heed to this. Behold! even as God is the one Good, and Light and Reafon, fo is He alfo Will and Love and Juffice and Truth, and in fhort all virtues. But all thefe are in God one Substance, and none of them can be put in exercise and wrought out into deeds without the creature, for in God, without the creature, they are only as a Substance or well-fpring, not as a work. But where the One, who is yet all thefe, layeth hold of a creature, and taketh poffeffion of it, and directeth and maketh use of it, so that He may perceive in it fomewhat of His own, behold, in fo far as He is Will and Love, He is taught of Himfelf, feeing that He is alfo Light and Reafon, and He willeth nothing but that One thing which He is.

Behold! in fuch a creature, there is no longer anything willed or loved but that which is good, becaufe it is good, and for no other reafon than that it is good, not becaufe it is this or that, or pleafeth or difpleafeth fuch a one, is pleafant or painful, bitter or fweet, or what not. All this is not afked about nor looked at. And fuch a creature doth nothing for its own fake, or in its own name, for it hath quitted all Self, and Me, and Mine, and We and Ours, and the like, and these are departed. It no longer faith, "I love myfelf, or this or that, or what not." And if you were to afk Love, "what loveft thou?" fhe would anfwer, "I love Goodnefs." "Wherefore ?" "Becaufe it is good, and for the fake of Goodnefs." So it is good and just and right to deem that if there were ought better than God, that must be loved better than God. And thus God loveth not Himfelf as Himfelf, but as Goodnefs. And if there were, and He knew, ought better than God, He would love that and not Himfelf. Thus the Self and the Me are wholly fundered from God, and belong to Him only in fo far as they are neceffary for Him to be a Perfon.

Behold! all that we have faid must indeed come to pass in a godlike man, or one who is truly "made a partaker of the divine nature;" for elfe he would not be truly fuch.

CHAP. XXXIII.

How when a Man is made truly godlike, his Love is pure and unmixed, and he loveth all Creatures, and doth his best for them.

ENCE it followeth, that in a truly godlike man, his love A is pure and unmixed, and full of kindness, infomuch that he cannot but love in fincerity all men and things, and wifh well, and do good to them, and rejoice in their welfare. Yea, let them do what they will to fuch a man, do him wrong or kindnefs, bear him love or hatred or the like, yea, if one could kill fuch a man a hundred times over, and he always came to life again, he could not but love the very man who had fo often flain him, although he had been treated fo unjuftly, and wickedly, and cruelly by him, and could not but wish well, and do well to him, and fhow him the very greatest kindness in his power, if the other would but only receive and take it at his hands. The proof and witness whereof may be feen in Christ; for he faid to Judas, when he betrayed him : "Friend, wherefore art thou come?" Just as if he had faid : "Thou hateft me, and art mine enemy, yet I love thee and am thy friend. Thou defireft and rejoiceft in my affliction, and doft the worft thou canft unto me; yet I defire and wifh thee all good, and would fain give it thee, and do it for thee, if thou would ft but take and receive it." As though God in human nature were faying : "I am pure, fimple Goodnefs, and therefore I cannot will, or defire, or rejoice in, or do or give anything but goodnefs. If I am to reward thee for thy evil and wickedness, I must do it with goodness, for I am and have nothing else." Hence therefore God, in a man who is "made partaker of His nature," desireth and taketh no revenge for all the wrong that is or can be done unto him. This we see in Christ, when he said : "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Likewife it is God's property that He doth not conftrain any by force to do or not to do anything, but He alloweth every man to do and leave undone according to his will, whether it be good or bad, and refifteth none. This too we fee in Chrift, who would not refift or defend himfelf when his enemies laid hands on him. And when Peter would have defended him, he faid unto Peter: "Put up thy fword into the fheath: the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" Neither may a man who is made a partaker of the divine nature, oppress or grieve any one. That is, it never entereth into his thoughts, or intents, or wifhes, to caufe pain or diftrefs to any, either by deed or neglect, by speech or filence.

CHAP. XXXIV.

How that if a Man will attain to that which is best, he must forswear his own Will; and he who helpeth a Man to his own Will helpeth him to the worst Thing he can.

OME may fay: "Now fince God willeth and defireth and doeth the best that may be to every one, He ought fo to help each man and order things for him, that they fhould fall out according to his will and fulfil his defires, fo that one might be a Pope, another a Bishop, and fo forth." Be affured, he who helpeth a man to his own will, helpeth him to the worst that he can. For the more a man followeth after his own A felf-will, and felf-will groweth in him, the farther off is he from God, the true Good, [for nothing burneth in hell but felf-will. Therefore it hath been faid, " Put off thine own will, and there will be no hell."] Now God is very willing to help a man and bring him to that which is beft in itfelf, and is of all things the best for man. But to this end, all felf-will must depart, as we have faid. And God would fain give man his help and counfel thereunto, for fo long as a man is feeking his own good, he doth not feek what is best for him, and will never find it. For a man's higheft good would be and truly is, that he should not feek himself nor his own things, nor be his own end in any respect, either in things spiritual or things natural, but should feek only the praise and glory of God and His holy will. This doth God teach and admonifh us.

Let him therefore who wishesh that God fhould help him to what is beft, and best for him, give diligent heed to God's counfels and teachings, and obey His commandments; thus, and not elfe, will he have, and hath already, God's help. Now God teacheth and admonisheth man to forsake himself and all things, and to follow Him only. " For he who loveth his foul,"* that is himfelf, and will guard it and keep it, " he shall lofe it;" that is, he who feeketh himfelf and his own advantage in all things, in fo doing lofeth his foul. "But he who hateth his foul for my fake fhall keep it unto life eternal;" that is,

* Mark viii. 35. Our authorized verfion uses the word " life," in this verfe, but as that would not quite bring out the force of the original, I have ventured to use the fame word for $\psi v \chi h$ here, by which it is translated in the two fucceeding verses.

Except in this and another paffage, where in quoting John iii. 8. $\pi v \epsilon \tilde{\nu} \mu \alpha$ is translated, as in Luther's version, Spirit instead of Wind, our authorized version has been always adhered to.—TR.

he who forfaketh himfelf and his own things, and giveth up his own will, and fulfilleth God's will, his foul will be kept and preferved unto Life Eternal.

CHAP. XXXV.

How there is deep and true Humility and Poorness of Spirit in a Man who is "made a Partaker of the Divine Nature."

OREOVER, in a man who is "made a partaker of the divine nature," there is a thorough and deep humility, and where this is not, the man hath not been "made a partaker of the divine nature." So Chrift taught in words and fulfilled in works. And this humility fpringeth up in the man, becaufe in the true Light he feeth (as it alfo really is) that Subftance, Life, Perceiving, Knowledge, Power, and what is thereof, do all belong to the True Good, and not to the creature; but that the creature of itfelf is nothing and hath nothing, and that when it turneth itfelf afide from the True Good in will or in works, nothing is left to it but pure evil. And therefore it is true to the very letter, that the creature, as creature, hath no worthinefs in itfelf, and no right to anything, and no claim over any one, either over God or over the creature, and that it ought to give itfelf up to God and fubmit to Him becaufe this is juft. And this is the chiefeft and moft weighty matter.

Now, if we ought to be, and defire to be, obedient and fubmit unto God, we must also fubmit to what we receive at the hands of any of his creatures, or our fubmission is all false. From this latter article floweth true humility, as indeed it doth also from the former.* And unless this verily ought to be, and were wholly agreeable to God's juffice, Chriftwould not have taught it in words, and fulfilled it in his life. And herein there is a veritable manifestation of God; and it is fo of a truth, that of God's truth and justice this creature shall be subject to God and all creatures, and no thing or perfon shall be subject or obedient to her. God and all the creatures have a right over her and to her, but she hath a right to nothing: fhe is a debtor to all, and nothing is owing to her, fo that fhe fhall be ready to bear all things from others, and alfo if needs be to do all things for others. And out of this groweth that poornefs of spirit of which Chrift faid : " Bleffed are the poor in fpirit" (that is to fay, the truly humble) " for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven." All this hath Chrift taught in words and fulfilled with his life.

CHAP. XXXVI.

How nothing is contrary to God but Sin only; and what Sin is in Kind and Act.

URTHER ye shall mark: when it is faid that such a thing, or such a deed is contrary to God, or that fuch a thing is hateful to God and grieveth His Spirit, ye muft know that no creature is contrary to God, or hateful or grievous unto Him, in fo far as it is, liveth, knoweth, hath power to do, or produce ought, and fo forth, for all this is not contrary to God. That an evil fpirit, or a man is, liveth, and the like, is altogether good and of God; for God is the Being of all that are, and the Life of all that live, and the Wifdom of all the wife; for all things have their being more truly in God than in themfelves, and alfo all their powers, knowledge, life, and the reft; for if it were not fo, God would not be all good. And thus all creatures are good. Now what is good is agreeable to God, and He will have it. Therefore it cannot be contrary to Him.

But what then is there which is contrary to God and hateful to Him? Nothing but Sin. But what is Sin? Mark this: Sin is nothing elfe than that the creature willeth otherwife than God willeth, and contrary to Him. Each of us may fee this in himfelf; for he who willeth otherwife than I, or whofe will is contrary to mine, is my foe; but he who willeth the fame as I, is my friend, and I love him. It is even fo with God: and that is fin, and is contrary to God, and hateful and grievous to Him. And he who willeth, speaketh, or is filent, doeth or leaveth undone, otherwife than as I will, is contrary to me, and an offence unto me. So it is also with God : when a man willeth otherwife than God, or contrary to God, whatever he doeth or leaveth undone, in fhort all that proceedeth from him, is contrary to God, and is fin. And what foever Will willeth otherwife than God, is against God's will. As Chrift faid : " he who is not with me is against me." Hereby may each man fee plainly whether or not he be without fin, and whether or not he be committing fin, and what fin is, and how fin ought to be atoned for, and wherewith it may be healed. And this contradiction to God's will is what we call, and is, difobedience. And therefore Adam, the I, the Self, Selfwill, Sin, or the Old Man, the turning afide or departing from God, do all mean one and the fame thing.

CHAP. XXXVII.

How in God, as God, there can neither be Grief, Sorrow, Displeasure, nor the like, but how it is otherwise in a Man who is "made a Partaker of the Divine Nature."

N God, as God, neither forrow nor grief nor difpleafuré can have place, and yet God is grieved on account of men's fins. Now fince grief cannot befall God without the creature, this cometh to pafs where He is made man, or when He dwelleth in a godlike man. And there, behold, fin is fo hateful to God, and grieveth Him fo fore, that He would willingly fuffer agony and death, if one man's fins might be thereby wafhed out. And if He were afked whether He would rather live and that fin fhould remain, or die and deftroy fin by His death, He would anfwer that He would a thoufand times rather die. For to God one man's fin is more hateful, and grieveth Him worfe than His own agony and death. Now if one man's fin grieveth God fo fore, what must the fins of all men do? Hereby ye may confider, how greatly man grieveth God with his fins.

And therefore where God is made man, or when He dwelleth in a truly godlike man, nothing is complained of but fin, and nothing elfe is hateful; for all that is, and is done, without fin, is as God will have it, and is His. But the mourning and forrow of a truly godlike man on account of fin, must and ought to last until death, should he live till the day of judgment, or for ever. From this caufe arofe that hidden anguish of Christ, of which none can tell or knoweth ought fave himfelf alone, and therefore is it called a myftery.

Moreover, this is an attribute of God, which He will have, and is well pleafed to fee in a man; and it is indeed God's own, for it belongeth not unto the man, he cannot make fin to be fo hateful to himfelf. And where God findeth this grief for fin, he loveth and efteemeth it more than ought elfe; becaufe it is, of all things, the bittereft and faddeft that man can endure.

All that is here written touching this divine attribute, which God will have man to poffefs, that it may be brought into exercife in a living foul, is taught us by that true Light, which alfo teacheth the man in whom this godlike forrow worketh, not to take it unto himfelf, any more than if he were not there. For fuch a man feeleth in himfelf that he hath not made it to fpring up in his heart, and that it is none of his, but belongeth to God alone.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

How we are to put on the Life of Christ from Love, and not for the sake of Reward, and how we must never grow careless concerning it, or cast it off.

OW, wherever a man hath been made a partaker of the divine nature, in him is fulfilled the beft and nobleft life, and the worthieft in God's eyes, that hath been or can be. And of that eternal love which loveth Goodnefs as Goodnefs and for the fake of Goodnefs, a true, noble, Chrift-like life is fo greatly beloved, that it will never be forfaken or caft off. Where a man hath tafted this life, it is impoffible for him ever to part with it, were he to live until the Judgment Day. And though he muft die a thoufand deaths, and though all the fufferings that ever befell all creatures A could be heaped upon him, he would rather undergo them all, than fall away from this excellent life; and if he could exchange it for an angel's life, he would not.

This is our answer to the question, " if a man, by putting on Christ's life, can get nothing more than he hath already, and ferve no end, what good will it do him ?" This life is not chofen in order to ferve any end, or to get anything by it, but for love of its noblenefs, and becaufe God loveth and efteemeth it fo greatly. And whoever faith that he hath had enough of it, and may now lay it afide, hath never tafted nor known it; for he who hath truly felt or tafted it, can never give it up again. And he who hath put on the life of Chrift with the intent to win or deferve ought thereby, hath taken it up as an hireling and not for love, and is altogether without it. For he who doth not take it up for love, hath none of it at all; he may dream indeed that he hath put it on, but he is deceived. Chrift did not lead fuch a life as his for the fake of reward, but out of love; and love maketh fuch a life light and taketh away all its hardfhips, fo that it becometh fweet and is gladly endured. But to him who hath not put it on from love, but hath done fo, as he dreameth, for the fake of reward, it is utterly bitter and a wearinefs, and he would fain be quit of it. And it is a fure token of an hireling that he wisheth his work were at an end. But he who truly loveth it, is not offended at its toil nor fuffering, nor the length of time it lasteth. Therefore it is written, " to ferve God and live to Him, is eafy to him who doeth it." Truly it is fo to him who doth it for love, but it is hard and wearifome to him who doth it for hire. It is the fame with all virtue and good works, and likewife with order, laws, obedience to precepts, and the like. But God rejoiceth more over one man who truly loveth, than over a thousand hirelings.

CHAP. XXXIX.

How God will have Order, Cuftom, Meafure, and the like in the Creature, feeing that he cannot have them without the Creature, and of four forts of Men who are concerned with this Order, Law, and Cuftom.

T is faid, and truly, God is above and without cuftom, meafure, and order, and yet giveth to all things their cuftom, order, meafure, fitnefs, and the like. The which is to be thus underftood. God will have all thefe to be, and they cannot have a being in Himfelf without the creature, for in God, apart from the creature, there is neither order nor diforder, cuftom nor chance, and fo forth; therefore He will have things fo that thefe fhall be, and fhall be put in exercife. For wherever there is word, work, or change, thefe muft be either according to order, cuftom, measure and fitness, or according to unfitness and diforder. Now fitness and order are better and nobler than their contraries.

But ye must mark : There are four forts of men who are concerned with order, laws, and cuftoms. Some keep them neither for God's fake, nor to ferve their own ends, but from conftraint: these have as little to do with them as may be, and find them a burden and heavy yoke. The fecond fort obey for the fake of reward : thefe are men who know nothing befide, or better than, laws and precepts, and imagine that by keeping them they may obtain the kingdom of Heaven and Eternal Life, and not otherwife; and him who practifeth many ordinances they think to be holy, and him who omitteth any tittle of them they think to be loft. Such men are very much in earneft and give great diligence to the work, and yet they find it a wearinefs. The third fort are wicked, falfe-hearted men, who dream and declare that they are perfect and need no ordinances, and make a mock of them.

The fourth are those who are enlightened with the True Light, who do not practife thefe things for reward, for they neither look nor defire to get anything thereby, but all that they do is from love alone. And these are not fo anxious and eager to accomplish much and with all fpeed as the fecond fort, but rather feek to do things in peace and good leifure; and if fome not weighty matter be neglected, they do not therefore think themfelves loft, for they know very well that order and fitness are better than diforder, and therefore they choose to walk orderly, yet know at the fame time that their falvation hangeth not thereon. Therefore they are not in fo great anxiety as the others. These men are judged and blamed by both the other parties, for the hirelings fay that they neglect their duties and accuse them of being unrighteous, and the like; and the others, (that is, the Free Spirits,*) hold them in derifion, and fay that they cleave unto weak and beggarly elements, and the like. But these enlightened men keep the middle path, which is also the best; for a lover of God is better and dearer to him than a hundred thousand hirelings. It is the fame with all their doings.

Furthermore, ye must mark, that to receive God's commands and his counfel and all his teaching, is the privilege of the inward man, after that he is united with God. And where there is fuch a union, the outward man is furely taught and ordered by the inward man, fo that no outward commandment or teaching is needed. But the commandments and laws of men belong to the outer man, and are needful for those men who know nothing better, for elfe they would not know what to do and what to refrain from, and would become like unto the dogs or other beafts.

CHAP. XL.

A good Account of the False Light and its Kind.

OW I have faid that there is a Falfe Light; but I must tell you more particularly what it is, and what belongeth thereunto. Behold, all that is contrary to the True Light belongeth unto the Falfe. To the True Light it belongeth of neceffity, that it feeketh not to deceive, nor confenteth that any fhould be wronged or deceived, neither can it be deceived.

But the false is deceived and a delusion, and deceiveth others along with itfelf. For God deceiveth no man, nor willeth that any should be deceived, and fo it is with His True Light. Now mark, the True Light is God or divine, but the False Light is Nature or natural. Now it belongeth to God, that He is neither this nor that, neither willeth nor defireth, nor feeketh anything in the man whom He hath made a partaker of the divine nature, fave Goodnefs as Goodnefs, and for the fake of Goodnefs. This is the token of the True Light. But to the Creature and Nature it belongeth to be fomewhat, this or that, and to intend and feek fome thing, this or that, and not fimply what is good without any Wherefore. And as God and the True Light are without all felf-will, felfishness, and felf-feeking, fo do the I, the Me, the Mine, and the like, belong unto the natural and falfe Light; for in all things it feeketh itfelf and its own ends, rather than Goodness for the sake of Goodness. This is its property, and the property of nature or the carnal man in each of us.

Now mark how it first cometh to be deceived. It doth not defire nor choose Goodness as Goodness, and for the sake of Goodness, but defireth and choose th itself and its own ends, rather than the Highest Good; and this is an error, and is the first deception.

Secondly, it dreameth itfelf to be that which it is not, for it dreameth itfelf to be God, and is truly nothing but nature. And becaufe it imagineth itfelf to be God, it taketh to itfelf what belongeth to God; and not that which is God's, when He is made man, or dwelleth in a godlike man, but that which is God's, and belongeth unto Him, as He is in eternity, without the creature. For, as it is faid, God needeth nothing, is free, not bound to work, apart by himfelf, above all things, and fo forth (which is all true); and God is unchangeable, not to be moved by anything, and is without confcience, and what He doeth that is well done; "So will I be," faith the Falfe Light, " for the more like God one is, the better one is, and therefore I will be like God and will be God, and will fit and go and stand at His right hand :" as Lucifer the Evil Spirit alfo faid.* Now God in Eternity is without contradiction, fuffering and grief, and nothing can hurt or vex him of all that is or befalleth. But with God, when He is made Man, it is otherwife.

In a word: all that can be deceived is deceived by this Falfe Light. Now fince all is deceived by this Falfe Light that can be deceived, and all that is creature and nature, and all that is not God nor of God, may be deceived, and fince this Falfe Light itfelf is nature, it is poffible for it to be deceived. And therefore it becometh and is deceived by itfelf, in that it rifeth and climbeth to fuch a height that it dreameth itfelf to be above nature, and fancieth it to be impoffible for nature or any creature to get fo high, and therefore it cometh to imagine itfelf God. And hence it taketh unto itself all that belongeth unto God, and specially what is His as He is in Eternity, and not as He is made Man. Therefore it thinketh and declareth itself to be above all works, words, cuftoms, laws and order, and above that life which Chrift led in the body which he poffeffed in his holy human nature. So likewife it professeth to remain unmoved by any of the creature's works; whether they be good or evil, against God or not, is all alike to it; and it keepeth itfelf apart from all things, like God in Eternity, and all that belongeth to God and to no creature it taketh unto itself, and vainly dreameth that this belongeth unto it; and deemeth itfelf well worthy of all this, and that it is just and right that all creatures should ferve it, and do it homage. And thus no contradiction, fuffering or grief is left unto it; indeed nothing but a mere bodily and carnal perceiving : this must remain until the death of the body, and what fuffering may accrue therefrom. Furthermore, this Falfe Light imagineth, and faith, that it has got beyond Chrift's life in the flesh, and that outward things have loft all power to touch it or give it pain, as it was with Chrift after his refurrection, together with many other ftrange and falfe conceits which arife and grow up from thefe.

And now fince this Falfe Light is nature, it poffeffeth the property of nature, which is to intend and feek itfelf and its own in all things, and what may be most expedient, easy and pleafant to nature and itfelf. And because it is deceived, it imagineth and proclaimeth it to be beft that each fhould feek and do what is beft for himfelf. It refufeth alfo to take knowledge of any Good but its own, that which it vainly fancieth to be Good. And if one fpeak to it of the One, true, everlafting Good, which is neither this nor that, it knoweth nothing thereof, and thinketh fcorn of it. And this is not unreafonable, for nature as nature cannot attain thereunto. Now this Falfe Light is merely nature, and therefore it cannot attain thereunto.

Further, this Falfe Light faith that it hath got above conficience and the fenfe of fin, and that whatever it doeth is right. Yea, it was faid by fuch a falfe free fpirit, who was in this error, that if he had killed ten men he fhould have as little fenfe of guilt as if he had killed a dog. Briefly: this falfe and deceived Light fleeth all that is harfh and contrary to nature, for this belongeth to it, feeing that it is nature. And feeing alfo that it is fo utterly deceived as to dream that it is God, it were ready to fwear by all that is holy, that it knoweth truly what is beft, and that both in belief and practice it hath reached the very fummit. For this caufe it cannot be converted or guided into the right path, even as it is with the Evil Spirit.

Mark further: in fo far as this Light imagineth itfelf to be God and taketh his attributes unto itfelf, it is Lucifer, the Evil Spirit; but in fo far as it fetteth at nought the life of Chrift, and other things belonging to the True Light, which have been taught and fulfilled by Chrift, it is Antichrift, for it teacheth contrary to Chrift. And as this Light is deceived by its own cunning and difcernment, fo all that is not God, or of God, is deceived by it, that is, all men who are not enlightened by the True Light and its love. For all who are enlightened by the True Light can never more be deceived, but whofo hath it not and choofeth to walk by the Falfe Light, he is deceived.

This cometh herefrom, that all men in whom the True Light is not, are bent upon themselves, and think much of themfelves, and feek and propofe their own ends in all things, and whatever is most pleasant and convenient to themfelves they hold to be beft. And whofo declareth the fame to be beft, and helpeth and teacheth them to attain it, him they follow after, and maintain to be the best and wifest of teachers. Now the False Light teacheth them this very doctrine, and showeth them all the means to come by their defire; therefore all those follow after it, who know not the True Light. And thus they are together deceived.

It is faid of Antichrift, that when he cometh, he who hath not the feal of God in his forehead, followeth after him, but as many as have the feal follow not after him. This agreeth with what hath been faid. It is indeed true, that it is good for a man that he fhould defire, or come by his own good. But this cannot come to pass fo long as a man is feeking, or purpofing his own good; for if he is to find and come by his own higheft good, he must lose it that he may find it. [As Chrift faid : "He who loveth his life shall lofe it." That is; he shall forfake and die to the defires of the flesh, and shall not obey his own will nor the lufts of the body, but obey the commands of God and those who are in authority over Him, and not feek his own, either in spiritual or natural things, but only the praise and glory of God in all things. For he who thus loseth his life shall find it again in Eternal Life. That is: all the goodnefs, help, comfort, and joy which are in the creature, in heaven or on earth, a true lover of God findeth comprehended in God Himfelf; yea, unfpeakably more, and as much nobler and more perfect as God the Creator is better, nobler, and more perfect than His creature. But by these excellences in the creature the False Light is deceived, and seeketh nothing but itself and its own in all things. Therefore it cometh never to the right way.]

Further, this False Light faith, that we should be without confeience or fense of fin, and that it is a weakness and folly to have anything to do with them : and this it will prove by faying that Chrift was without confcience and fense of fin. We may answer and fay: Satan is alfo without them, and is none the better for that. Mark what a fense of fin is. It is that we perceive how man has turned away from God in his will (this is what we call fin), and that this is man's fault, not God's, for God is guiltlefs of fin. Now, who is there that knoweth himfelf to be free from fin fave Chrift alone? Scarcely will any other affirm this. Now he who is without fenfe of fin is either Chrift or the Evil Spirit.

Briefly: where this True Light is, there is a true, just life fuch as God loveth and efteemeth. And if the man's life is not perfect as Christ's was, yet it is framed and builded after his, and his life is loved, together with all that agreeth with decency, order, and all other virtues, and all Self-will, I, Mine, Me, and the like, is loft; nothing is purposed or sought but Goodness, for the fake of Goodnefs, and as Goodnefs. But where that Falfe Light is, there men become heedless of Christ's life and all virtue, and feek and intend whatever is convenient and pleafant to nature. From this arifeth a falfe, licentious freedom, fo that men grow regardlefs and careless of everything. For the True Light is God's feed, and therefore it bringeth forth the fruits of God. And fo likewife the Falfe Light is the feed of the Devil; and where that is fown, the fruits of the Devil fpring up—nay, the very Devil himfelf. This ye may underftand by giving heed to what hath been faid.

CHAP. XLI.

How that be is to be called, and is truly, a Partaker of the Divine Nature, who is illuminated with the Divine Light, and inflamed with Eternal Love, and how Light and Knowledge are worth nothing without Love.

OME may ask, "What is it to be 'a partaker of the divine nature,' or a godlike man?"

Antwer: he who is imbued with or illuminated by the Eternal or divine Light, and inflamed or confumed with Eternal or divine love, he is a godlike man and a partaker of the divine nature; and of the nature of this True Light we have faid fomewhat already.

But ye must know that this Light or knowledge is worth nothing without Love. This ye may fee if ye call to mind, that though a man may know very well what is virtue or wickedness, yet if he doth not love virtue, he is not virtuous, for he obeyeth vice. But if he loveth virtue he followeth after it, and his love maketh him an enemy to wickednefs, fo that he will not do or practife it, and hateth it also in other men; and he loveth virtue fo that he would not leave a virtue unpractifed even if he might, and this for no reward, but fimply for the love of virtue. And to him virtue is its own reward, and he is content therewith, and would take no treasure or riches in exchange for it. Such an one is already a virtuous man, or he is in the way to be fo. And he who is a truly virtuous man would not ceafe to be fo, to gain the whole world, yea, he would rather die a miferable death.

It is the fame with justice. Many a man knoweth full well what is just or unjust, and yet neither is nor ever will become a just man. For he loveth not justice, and therefore he worketh wickedness and injustice. If he loved justice, he would not do an unjust thing; for he would feel fuch hatred and indignation towards injustice whereever he faw it, that he would do or fuffer anything that injustice might be put an end to, and men might become juft. And he would rather die than do an injustice, and all this for nothing but the love of justice. And to him, juffice is her own reward, and rewardeth him with herfelf; and fo there liveth a just man, and he would rather die a thousand times over than live as an unjust man. It is the fame with truth: a man may know full well what is true or a lie, but if he loveth not the truth he is not a true man; but if he loveth, it is with truth even as with juftice. Of juffice speaketh Isaiah in the 5th chapter: "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!"

Thus may we perceive that knowledge and light profit nothing without Love. We fee this in the Evil Spirit; he perceiveth and knoweth good and evil, right and wrong, and the like; but fince he hath no love for the good that he feeth, he becometh not good, as he would if he had any love for the truth and other virtues which he feeth. It is indeed true that Love must be guided and taught of Knowledge, but if Knowledge be not followed by Love, it will avail nothing. It is the fame with God and divine things. Let a man know much about God and divine things, nay, dream that he feeth and understandeth what God Himself is, if he have not Love, he will never become like unto God, or a " partaker of the divine nature." But if there be true Love along with his knowledge, he cannot but cleave to God, and forfake all that is not God or of Him, and hate it and fight against it, and find it a crofs and a forrow.

And this Love fo maketh a man one with God, that he can nevermore be feparated from Him.

CHAP. XLII.

A Question: whether we can know God and not love Him, and how there are two kinds of Light and Love—a true and a falfe.

ERE is an honeft question; namely, it hath been faid that he who knoweth God and loveth Him not, will never befaved by his knowledge; the which founds as if we might know God and not love Him. Yet we have faid elfewhere, that where God is known, He is also loved, and whofoever knoweth God must love Him. How may thefe things agree? Here ye must mark one thing. We have spoken of two Lights-a True and a Falfe. So alfo there are two kinds of Love, a True and a False. And each kind of Love is taught or guided by its own kind of Light or Reafon. Now, the True Light maketh True Love, and the Falfe Light maketh Falfe Love; for whatever Light deemeth to be beft, fhe delivereth unto Love as the best, and biddeth her love it, and Love obeyeth, and fulfilleth her commands.

Now, as we have faid, the Falfe Light is natural, and is Nature herfelf. Therefore every property belongeth unto it which belongeth unto nature, fuch as the Me, the Mine, the Self, and the like; and therefore it must needs be deceived in itself and be false; for no I, Me, or Mine, ever came to the True Light or Knowledge undeceived, fave once only; to wit, in God made Man. And if we are to come to the knowledge of the fimple Truth, all these must depart and perish. And in particular it belongeth to the natural Light that it would fain know or learn much, if it were poffible, and hath great pleafure, delight and glorying in its difcernment and knowledge; and therefore it is always longing to know more and more, and never cometh to reft and fatisfaction, and the more it learneth and knoweth, the more doth it delight and glory therein. And when it hath come fo high, that it thinketh to know all things and to be above all things, it standeth on its highest pinnacle of delight and glory, and then it holdeth Knowledge to be the best and noblest of all things, and therefore it teacheth Love to love knowledge and difcern-ment as the beft and most excellent of all things. Behold, then knowledge and difcernment come to be more loved than that which is difcerned, for the falfe natural Light loveth its knowledge and powers, which are itfelf, more than that which is known. And were it poffible that this falfe natural Light should understand the simple Truth, as it is in God and in truth, it still would not lofe its own property, that is, it would not depart from itfelf and its own things. Behold, in this fense there is knowledge, without the love of that which is or may be known.

Alfo this Light rifeth and climbeth fo high that it vainly thinketh that it knoweth God and the pure, fimple Truth, and thus it loveth itfelf in Him. And it is true that God can be known only by God. Wherefore as this Light vainly thinketh to underftand God, it imagineth itfelf to be God, and giveth itfelf out to be God, and wifheth to be accounted fo, and thinketh itfelf to be above all things, and well worthy of all things, and that it hath a right to all things, and hath got beyond all things, fuch as commandments, laws, and virtue, and even beyond Chrift and a Christian life, and setteth all these at nought, for it doth not fet up to be Chrift, but the Eternal God. And this is becaufe Chrift's life is diffafteful and burdenfome to nature, therefore fhe will have nothing to do with it; but to be God in eternity and not man,." or to be Chrift as he was after his refurrection, is all eafy, and pleafant, and comfortable to nature, and fo fhe holdeth it to be beft. Behold, with this falfe and deluded Love, fomething may be known without being loved, for the feeing and knowing is more loved than that which is known.

Further, there is a kind of learning which is called knowledge; to wit, when, through hearfay, or reading, or great acquaintance with Scripture, fome fancy themfelves to know much, and call it knowledge, and fay, "I know this or that." And if you afk, "How doft thou know it?" they anfwer, "I have read it in the Scriptures," and the like. Behold, this they call underftanding and knowing. Yet this is not knowledge, but belief, and many things are known and loved and feen only with this fort of perceiving and knowing.

There is alfo yet another kind of Love, which is efpecially falfe, to wit, when fomething is loved for the fake of a reward, as when juftice is loved not for the fake of juftice, but to obtain fomething thereby, and fo on. And where a creature loveth other creatures for the fake of fomething that they have, or loveth God, for the fake of fomething of her own, it is all falfe Love; and this Love belongeth properly to nature, for nature as nature can feel and know no other love than this; for if ye look narrowly into it, nature as nature loveth nothing befide herfelf. On this wife fomething may be feen to be good and not loved.

But true Love is taught and guided by the true Light and Reafon, and this true, eternal and divine Light teacheth Love to love nothing but the One true and Perfect Good, and that fimply for its own fake, and not for the fake of a reward, or in the hope of obtaining anything, but fimply for the love of Goodnefs, becaufe it is good and hath a right to be loved. And all that is thus feen by the help of the True Light must also be loved of the True Love. Now that Perfect Good, which we call God, cannot be perceived but by the True Light; therefore He must be loved wherever He is feen or made known.

CHAP. XLIII.

Whereby we may know a Man who is made a partaker of the divine Nature, and what belongeth unto him; and further, what is the token of a False Light, and a False Free-Tbinker.

61.0

URTHER mark ye; that when the True Love and True Light are in a man, the Perfect Good is known and loved for itfelf and as itfelf; and yet not fo that it loveth itfelf of itfelf and as itfelf, but the one True and Perfect Good can and will love nothing elfe, in fo far as it is in itfelf, fave the one, true Goodnefs. Now if this is itfelf, it muft love itfelf, yet not as itfelf nor as of itfelf, but in this wife: that the One true Good loveth the One Perfect Goodnefs, and the One Perfect Goodnefs is loved of the One, true and Perfect Good. And in this fense that faying is true, that "God loveth not Himself as Himself." For if there were ought better than God, God would love that, and not Himfelf. For in this True Light and True Love there neither is nor can remain any I, Me, Mine, Thou, Thine, and the like, but that Light perceiveth and knoweth that there is a Good which is all Good and above all Good, and that all good things are of one Substance in the One Good, and that without that One, there is no good thing. And therefore, where this Light is, the man's end and aim is not this or that, Me or Thee, or the like, but only the One, who is neither I nor Thou, this nor that, but is above all I and Thou, this and that; and in Him all Goodness is loved as One Good, according to that faying: "All in One as One, and One in All as All, and One and all Good, is loved through the One in One, and for the fake of the One, for the love that man hath to the One."

Behold, in fuch a man must all thought of Self, all felf-feeking, felfwill, and what cometh thereof, be utterly loft and furrendered and given over to God, except in fo far as they are neceffary to make up a perfon. And whatever cometh to pass in a man who is truly godlike, whether he do or fuffer, all is done in this Light and this Love, and from the fame, through the fame, unto the fame again. And in his heart there is a content and a quietnefs, fo that he doth not defire to know more or lefs, to have, to live, to die, to be, or not to be, or anything of the kind; thefe become all one and alike to him, and he complaineth of nothing but of fin only. And what fin is, we have faid already, namely, to defire or will anything otherwife than the One Perfect Good and the One Eternal Will, and apart from and contrary to them, or to wish to have a will of one's own. And what is done of fin, fuch as lies, fraud, injustice, treachery, and all iniquity, in fhort, all that we call fin, cometh hence, that man hath another will than God and the True Good; for were there no will but the One Will, no fin could ever be committed. Therefore we may well fay that all felf-will is fin, and there is no fin but what fpringeth therefrom. And this is the only thing which a truly godlike man complaineth of; but to him, this is fuch a fore pain and grief, that he would die a hundred deaths in agony and fhame, rather than endure it; and this his grief must last until death, and where it is not, there be fure that the man is not truly godlike, or a partaker of the divine nature.

Now, feeing that in this Light and Love, all Good is loved in One and as One, and the One in all things, and in all things as One and as All, therefore all those things must be loved that rightly are of good report; fuch as virtue, order, seemliness, justice, truth, and the like; and all that belongeth to God in the true Good and is His own, is loved and praifed; and all that is without this Good, and contrary to it, is a forrow and a pain, and is hated as fin, for it is of a truth fin. And he who liveth in the true Light and true Love, hath the beft, nobleft, and worthieft life that ever was or will be, and therefore it cannot but be loved and praifed above any other life. This life was and is in Chrift to perfection, elfe he were not the Chrift.

And the love wherewith the man loveth this noble life and all goodnefs, maketh, that all which he is called upon to do, or fuffer, or pafs through, and which muft needs be, he doeth or endureth willingly and worthily, however hard it may be to nature. Therefore faith Chrift: "My yoke is eafy, and my burden is light.*" This cometh of the love which loveth this admirable life. This we may fee in the beloved Apostles and Martyrs; they fuffered willingly and gladly all that was done unto them, and never asked of God that their fuffering and tortures might be made shorter, or lighter or fewer, but only that they might remain fteadfaft and endure to the end. Of a truth all that is the fruit of divine Love in a truly godlike man is fo fimple, plain and ftraightforward, that he can never properly give an account of it by writing or by fpeech, but only fay that fo it is. And he who hath it not doth not even believe in it; how then can he come to know it?

On the other hand, the life of the natural man, where he hath a lively, fubtle, cunning nature is fo manifold and complex, and feeketh and inventeth fo many turnings and windings and falfehoods for its own ends, and that fo continually, that this alfo is neither to be uttered nor fet forth.

* Matt. xi. 30.

Now, fince all falfehood is deceived, and all deception beginneth in felf-deception, fo is it alfo with this falfe Light and Life, for he who deceiveth is alfo deceived, as we have faid before. And in this false Light and Life is found everything that belongeth to the Evil Spirit and is his, infomuch that they cannot be difcerned apart; for the falfe Light is the Evil Spirit, and the Evil Spirit is this falfe Light. Hereby we may know this. For even as the Evil Spirit thinketh himfelf to be God, or would fain be God, or be thought to be God, and in all this is fo utterly deceived that he doth not think himfelf to be deceived, fo is it also with this false Light, and the Love and Life that is thereof. And as the Devil would fain deceive all men. and draw them to himfelf and his works. and make them like himfelf, and ufeth much art and cunning to this end, fo is it also with this false Light; and as no one may turn the Evil Spirit from his own way, fo no one can turn this deceived and deceitful Light from its errors. And the caufe thereof is, that both these two, the Devil and Nature, vainly think that they are not deceived, and that it standeth quite well with them. And this is the very worft and most mischievous delusion. Thus the Devil and nature are one, and where nature is conquered the Devil is alfo conquered, and in like manner where nature is not conquered the Devil is not conquered. Whether as touching the outward life in the world, or the inward life of the spirit, this false Light continueth in its state of blindness and falsehood, fo that it is both deceived itself and deceiveth others with it, wherefoever it may.

From what hath here been faid, ye may understand and perceive more than hath been expressly fet forth. For whenever we speak of the Adam, and difobedience, and of the old man, of felf-feeking, felf-will, and felf-ferving, of the I, the Me, and the Mine, nature, falsehood, the Devil, fin; it is all one and the fame thing. These are all contrary to God, and remain without God.

CHAP. XLIV.

How nothing is contrary to God but Self-will, and how he who seeketh his own Good for his own sake, findeth it not; and how a Man of himself neither knoweth nor can do any good Thing.

OW, it may be asked; is there ought which is contrary to God and the true Good? I fay, No. Likewife there is nothing without God, except to will otherwife than is willed by the Eternal Will;

that is, contrary to the Eternal Will. Now the Eternal Will willeth that nothing be willed or loved but the Eternal Goodnefs. And where it is otherwife, there is fomething contrary to Him, and in this fenfe it is true that he who is without God is contrary to God; but in truth there is no Being contrary to God or the true Good.

We must understand it as though God faid : " he who willeth without Me, or willeth not what I will, or otherwife than as I will, he willeth contrary to Me, for My will is that no one should will otherwife than I, and that there should be no will without Me, and without My will; even as without Me, there is neither Substance, nor Life, nor this, nor that, fo alfo there should be no Will apart from Me, and without My will." And even as in truth all beings are one in fubstance in the Perfect Being, and all good is one in the One Being, and fo forth, and cannot exift without that One, fo shall all wills be one in the One Perfect Will, and there shall be no will apart from that One. And whatever is otherwife is wrong, and contrary to God and His will, and therefore it is fin. Therefore all will apart from God's will (that is, all felf-will), is fin, and fo is all that is done from felf-will. So long as a man feeketh his own will and his own higheft Good, becaufe it is his, and for his own fake, he will never find it; for fo long as he doeth this, he is not feeking his own higheft Good, and how then should he find it? For fo long as he doeth this, he feeketh himfelf, and dreameth that he is himfelf the higheft Good; and feeing that he is not the higheft Good, he feeketh not the higheft Good, fo long as he feeketh himfelf. But whofoever feeketh, loveth, and purfueth Goodness as Goodness and for the fake of Goodnefs, and maketh that his end, for nothing but the love of Goodnefs, not for love of the I, Me, Mine, Self, and the like, he will find the higheft Good, for he feeketh it aright, and they who feek it otherwife do err. And truly it is on this wife that the true and Perfect Goodnefs feeketh and loveth and purfueth itfelf, and therefore it findeth itfelf.

It is a great folly when a man, or any creature dreameth that he knoweth or can accomplish aught of himself, and above all when he dreameth that he knoweth or can fulfil any good thing, whereby he may deferve much at God's hands, and prevail with Him. If he understood rightly, he would fee that this is to put a great affront upon God. But the True and Perfect Goodness hath compassion on the foolish simple man who knoweth no better, and ordereth things for the best for him, and giveth him as much of the good things of God as he is able to receive. But as we have faid afore, he findeth and receiveth not the True Good fo long as he remaineth unchanged; for unlefs Self and Me depart, he will never find or receive it.

CHAP. XLV.

How that where there is a Christian Life, Christ dwelleth, and how Christ's Life is the best and most admirable Life that ever hath been or can be.

E who knoweth and underftandeth Chrift's life, knoweth and understandeth Chrift

himfelf; and in like manner, he who underftandeth not his life, doth not underftand Chrift himfelf. And he who believeth on Chrift, believeth that his life is the beft and nobleft life that can be, and if a man believe not this, neither doth he believe on Chrift himfelf. And in fo far as a man's life is according to Chrift, Chrift himfelf dwelleth in him, and if he hath not the one neither hath he the other. For where there is the life of Chrift, there is Christ himself, and where his life is not, Christ is not, and where a man hath his life, he may fay with St. Paul, "I live, yet not I, but Chrift liveth in me."* And this is the nobleft and beft life; for in him who hath it, God Himfelf dwelleth, with all goodnefs. So how could there be a better life? When we speak of obedience, of the new man, of the True Light, the True Love, or the life of Chrift, it is all the fame thing, and where one of thefe is, there are they all, and where one is wanting, there is none of them, for they are all one in truth and fubstance. And whatever may bring about that new birth which maketh alive in Chrift, to that let us cleave with all our might and to nought elfe; and let us forfwear and flee all that may hinder

* Galatians ii. 20.

it. And he who hath received this life in the Holy Sacrament, hath verily and indeed received Chrift, and the more of that life he hath received, the more he hath received of Chrift, and the lefs, the lefs of Chrift.

CHAP. XLVI.

How entire Satisfaction and true Reft are to be found in God alone, and not in any Creature; and how he who will be obedient unto God, must also be obedient to the Creatures, with all Quietness, and he who would love God, must love all Things in One.

T is faid, that he who is content to find all his fatisfaction in God, hath enough; and this is true. And he who findeth fatiffaction in ought which is this and that, findeth it not in God; and he who findeth it in God, findeth it in nothing elfe, but in that which is neither this nor that, but is All. For God is One and must be One, and God is All and must be All. And now what is, and is not One, is not God; and what is, and is not All and above All, is alfo not God, for God is One and above One, and All and above All. Now he who findeth full fatisfaction in God, receiveth all his fatisfaction from One fource, and from One only, as One. And a man cannot find all fatisfaction in God, unlefs all things are One to him, and One is All, and fome thing and nothing are alike.* But where it should be thus, there would be true fatisfaction, and not elfe.

Therefore alfo, he who will wholly commit himfelf unto God and be obedient to Him, must alfo refign himfelf to all things, and be willing to fuffer them, without refifting or defending himfelf or calling for fuccour. And he who doth not thus refign or fubmit himfelf to all things in One as One, doth not refign or fubmit himfelf to God. Let us look at Chrift. And he who shall and will lie still under God's hand, must lie still under all things in One as One, and in no wife withstand any fuffering. Such an one were a Chrift. And he who fighteth against affliction and refuseth to endure it, is truly fighting against God. That is to fay, we may not withstand any creature or thing by force or war, either in will or works. But we may indeed without fin prevent affliction, or avoid it, or flee from it.

Now, he who fhall or will love God, loveth all things in One as All, One and All, and One in All as All in One; and he who loveth fomewhat, this or that, otherwife than in the One, and for the fake of the One, loveth not God, for he loveth fomewhat which is not God. Therefore he loveth it more than God. Now he who loveth fomewhat more than God or along with God, loveth not God, for He muft be and will be alone loved, and verily nothing ought to be loved but God alone. And when the true divine Light and Love dwell in a man, he loveth nothing elfe but God alone, for he loveth God as Goodnefs and for the fake of Goodnefs, and all Goodnefs as One, and One as All; for, in truth, All is One and One is All in God.

CHAP. XLVII.

A Question: Whether, if we ought to love all Things, we ought to love Sin also?

OME may put a question here and fay: " If we are to love all things, must we then love fin too?" I anfwer: No. When I fay " all things," I mean all Good; and all that is, is good, in fo far as it hath Being. The Devil is good in fo far as he hath Being. In this fense nothing is evil, or not good. But fin is to will, defire, or love otherwife than as God doth. And Willing is not Being, therefore it is not good. Nothing is good except in fo far as it is in God and with God. Now all things have their Being in God, and more truly in God than in themfelves, and therefore all things are good in fo far as they have a Being, and if there were aught that had not its Being in God, it would not be good. Now behold, the willing or defiring which is contrary to God is not in God; for God cannot will or defire anything contrary to Himfelf, or otherwife than Himfelf. Therefore it is evil or not good, and is merely nought.

God loveth alfo works, but not all works. Which then? Such as are done from the teaching and guidance of the True Light and the True Love; and what is done from these and in thefe, is done in fpirit and in truth, and what is thereof, is God's, and pleafeth Him well. But what is done of the false Light and false Love, is all of the Wicked One; and efpecially what happeneth, is done or left undone, wrought or fuffered from any other will, or defire, or love, than God's will, or defire, or love. This is, and cometh to pass, without God and contrary to God, and is utterly contrary to good works, and is altogether fin.

CHAP. XLVIII.

How we must believe certain Things of God's Truth beforehand, ere we can come to a true Knowledge and Experience thereof.

HRIST faid, "He that believeth not," or will not or cannot believe, "fhall be damned." It is fo of a truth; for a man, while he is in this prefent time, hath not knowledge; and he cannot attain unto it, unlefs he firft believe. And he who would know before he believeth, cometh never to true knowledge. We fpeak not here of the articles of the Chriftian faith, for every one believeth them, and they are common to every Chriftian man, whether he be finful or faved, good or wicked, and they muft be believed in the firft place, for without that, one cannot come to know them. But we are fpeaking of a certain Truth which it is poffible to know by experience, but which ye must believe in, before that ye know it by experience, else ye will never come to know it truly. This is the faith of which Christ speaketh in that faying of His.

CHAP. XLIX.

Of Self-will, and how Lucifer and Adam fell away from God through Self-will.

T hath been faid, that there is of nothing fo much in hell as of felf-will. The which is true, for there is nothing elfe there than felf-will, and if there were no felf-will there would be no Devil and no hell. When it is faid that Lucifer fell from Heaven, and turned away from God and the like, it meaneth nothing elfe than that he would have his own will, and would not be at one with the Eternal Will. So was it likewife with Adam in Paradife. And when we fay Selfwill, we mean, to will otherwife than as the One and Eternal Will of God willeth.

CHAP. L.

How this present Time is a Paradise and outer Court of Heaven, and how therein there is only one Tree forbidden, that is, Self-will.

HAT is Paradife? All things that are; for all are goodly and pleafant, and therefore may fitly be called a Paradife. It is faid alfo, that Paradife is an outer court of Heaven. Even fo this world is verily an outer court of the Eternal, or of Eternity, and specially what ever in Time, or any temporal things or creatures, manifesteth or remindeth us of God or Eternity; for the creatures are a guide and a path unto God and Eternity. Thus this world is an outer court of Eternity, and therefore it may well be called a Paradife, for it is fuch in truth. And in this Paradife, all things are lawful, fave one tree and the fruits thereof. That is to fay : of all things that are, nothing is forbidden and nothing is contrary to God but one thing only: that is, Self-will, or to will otherwife than as the Eternal Will would have it. Remember this. For God faith to Adam, that is, to every man, " Whatever thou art, or doeft, or leaveft undone, or whatever cometh to pass, is all lawful and not forbidden if it be not done from or according to thy will, but for the fake of and according to My will. But all that is done from thine own will is contrary to the Eternal Will."

It is not that every work which is thus wrought is in itfelf contrary to the Eternal Will, but in fo far as it is wrought from a different will, or otherwife than from the Eternal and Divine Will.

CHAP. LI.

Wherefore God hath created Self-will, feeing that it is fo contrary to Him.

ated it, and fet it in Paradife?"

Anfwer: whatever man or creature defireth to dive into and understand the fecret counfel and will of God, fo that he would fain know wherefore God doeth this, or doeth not that, and the like, defireth the fame as Adam and the Devil. For this defire is feldom from ought elfe than that the man taketh delight in knowing, and glorieth therein, and this is sheer pride. And fo long as this defire lasteth, the truth will never be known, and the man is even as Adam or the Devil. A truly humble and enlightened man doth not defire of God that He should reveal His fecrets unto him, and afk wherefore God doeth this or that, or hindereth or alloweth fuch a thing, and fo forth; but he defireth only to know how he may pleafe God, and become as nought in himfelf, having no will, and that the Eternal Will may live in him, and have full poffeffion of him, undifturbed by any other will, and how its due may be rendered to the Eternal Will, by him and through him.

However, there is yet another anfwer to this queftion, for we may fay: the moft noble and delightful gift that is beftowed on any creature is that of perceiving, or Reafon, and Will. And thefe two are fo bound together, that where the one is, there the other is alfo. And if it were not for thefe two gifts, there would be no reafonable creatures, but only brutes and brutifhnefs; and that were a great lofs, for God would never have His due, and behold Himfelf and His attributes manifested in deeds and works; the which ought to be, and is necessary to perfection. Now, behold, Perception and Reafon are created and bestowed along with Will, to the intent that they may inftruct the will and alfo themfelves, that neither perception nor will is of itfelf, nor is nor ought to be unto itfelf, nor ought to feek or obey itfelf. Neither shall they turn themselves to their own advantage, nor make use of themfelves to their own ends and purpofes; for His they are from Whom they do proceed, and unto Him shall they fubmit, and flow back into Him, and become nought in themfelves, that is, in their felfishnefs.

But here ye must confider more particularly, fomewhat touching the Will.

There is an Eternal Will, which is in God a first principle and substance, apart from all works and effects,* and the fame will is in Man, or the creature, willing certain things, and bringing them to pass. For it belongeth unto the Will and is its property that it shall will fomething. What elfe is it for ? For it were in vain, unless it had fome work to do, and this it cannot have without the creature. Therefore there must be creatures, and God will have them, to the end that the Will may be put in exercise by their means, and work, which in God is and must be without work. Therefore the will in the creature, which we call a created will, is as truly God's as the Eternal Will, and is not of the creature.

And now, fince God cannot bring His will into exercife, working and caufing changes, without the creature, therefore it pleafeth Him to do fo in and with the creature. Therefore the will is not given to be exerted by the creature, but only by God, who hath a right to work out His own will by means of the will which is in man, and yet is God's. And in whatever man or creature it should be purely and wholly thus, the will would be exerted not by the man but by God, and thus it would not be felf-will, and the man would not will otherwife than as God willeth; for God Himfelf would move the will and not man. And thus the will would be one with the Eternal Will, and flow out into it, though the man would still keep his sense of liking and difliking, pleafure and pain, and the like. For wherever the will is exerted, there must be a sense of liking and difliking; for if things go according to his will, the man liketh it, and if they do not, he difliketh it, and this liking and difliking are not of the man's producing, but of God's. [For whatever is the fource of the will, is the fource of these also.]* Now the will cometh not of man but of God, therefore liking and difliking come from Him alfo. But nothing is complained of, fave only what is contrary to God. So alfo there is no joy but of God alone, and that which is His and belongeth unto Him. And as it is with the will, fo is it alfo with perception, reason, gifts, love, and all the powers of man; they are all of God, and not of man. And wherever the will should be altogether furrendered to God, the reft would of a certainty be furrendered likewife, and God would have His right, and the man's will would not be his own. Behold, therefore hath God created the will, but not that it should be felf-will.

Now cometh the Devil or Adam, that is to fay, false nature, and taketh this will unto itself and maketh the fame its own, and ufeth it for itfelf and its own ends. And this is the mischief and wrong, and the bite that Adam made in the apple, which is forbidden, because it is contrary to God. And therefore, fo long as there is any felf-will, there will never be true love, true peace, true rest. This we fee both in man and in the Devil. And there will never be true bleffednefs either in time or eternity, where this felf-will is working, that is to fay, where man taketh the will unto himfelf and maketh it his own. And if it be not furrendered in this prefent time, but carried over into eternity, it may be foreseen that it will never be furrendered, and then of a truth there will never be content, nor reft, nor bleffednefs; as we may fee by the Devil. If there were no reason or will in the creatures, God were, and must remain for ever, unknown, unloved, unpraised and unhonoured, and all the creatures would be worth nothing, and were of no avail to God. Behold thus the queftion which was put to us is anfwered.* And if there were any, who, by my much writing (which yet is brief and profitable in God), might be led to amend their ways, this were indeed well-pleafing unto God.

That which is free, none may call his own, and he who maketh it his own, committeth a wrong. Now, in the whole realm of freedom, nothing is fo free as the will, and he who maketh it his own, and fuffereth it not to remain in its excellent freedom, and free nobility, and in its free exercife, doeth a grievous wrong. This is what is done by the Devil and Adam and all their followers. But he who leaveth the will in its noble freedom doeth right, and this doth Chrift with all his followers. And whole robbeth the will of its noble freedom and maketh it his own, must of necessity as his reward, be laden with cares and troubles, with difcontent, difquiet, unreft, and all manner of wretchednefs, and this will remain andendure in time and in eternity. But he who leaveth the will in its freedom, hath content, peace, reft and bleffednefs in time and in eternity. Wherever there is a man in whom the will is not enflaved, but continueth noble and free, there is a true freeman not in bondage to any, one of those to whom Chrift faid : " the truth shall make you free;" and immediately after, he faith : " if the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."*

Furthermore, mark ye that where the will enjoyeth its freedom, it hath its proper work, that is, willing. And where it choofeth whatever it will unhindered, it always choofeth in all things what is nobleft and beft, and all that is not noble and good it hateth, and findeth to be a grief and offence unto it. And the more free and unhindered the will is, the more is it pained by evil, injustice, iniquity, and in fhort all manner of wickednefs and fin, and the more do they grieve and afflict it. This we fee in Chrift, whofe will was the pureft and the least fettered, or brought into bondage of any man's that ever lived. So likewife was Chrift's human nature the most free and fingle of all creatures, and yet felt the deepest grief, pain, and indignation at fin that any creature ever felt. But when men claim freedom for their own, fo as to feel no forrow or indignation at fin and what is contrary to God, but fay that we must heed nothing and care for nothing, but be, in this prefent time, as Chrift was after his refurrection, and the like; - this is no true and divine freedom fpringing from the true divine Light, but a natural, unrighteous, falfe, and deceitful freedom, fpringing from a natural, false and deluded light.

Were there no felf-will, there would be also no ownership. In heaven there is no ownership; hence there are found content, true peace and all bleffednefs. If any one there took upon him to call anything his own, he would ftraightway be thrust out into hell, and would become an evil fpirit. But in hell every one will have felf-will, therefore there is all manner of mifery and wretchednefs. So is it also here on earth. But if there were one in hell who should get quit of his felf-will and call nothing his own, he would come out of hell into heaven. Now, in this prefent time, man is fet between heaven and hell, and may turn himfelf towards which he will. For the more he hath of ownership, the more he hath of hell and mifery; and the lefs of felf-will, the lefs of hell, and the nearer he is to the Kingdom of Heaven. And could a man, while on earth, be wholly quit of felf-will and ownership, and stand up free and at large in God's true light, and continue therein, he would be fure of the Kingdom of Heaven. He who hath fomething, or feeketh or longeth to have fomething of his own, is himfelf a flave, and he who hath nothing of his own, nor feeketh nor longeth thereafter, is free and at large, and in bondage to none.

All that hath here been faid, Chrift taught in words and fulfilled in works for three and thirty years, and he teacheth it to us very briefly when he faith : "Follow me." But he who will follow him must forfake all things, for he renounced all things fo utterly as no man elfe hath ever done. Moreover, he who will come after him must take up the crofs, and the crofs is nothing else than Christ's life, for that is a bitter crofs to nature. Therefore he faith : "And he that taketh not his crofs, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me, and cannot be my disciple."* But nature in her false freedom, weeneth she hath forsaken all things, yet she will have none of the cross, and saith she hath had enough of it already, and needeth it no longer, and thus she is deceived. For had she ever tasted the cross she would never part with it again. He that believeth on Christ must believe all that is here written.

* Matt. x. 38, and Luke xiv. 27.

CHAP. LII.

How we must take those two Sayings of Christ: "No Man cometh unto the Father, but by me," and "No Man cometh unto me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him."

HRISTfaith: "no man cometh unto the Father but by me."* Now mark how we muft come unto the Father through Chrift. The man shall set a watch over him-* John xiv. 6.

felf and all that belongeth to him within and without, and shall fo direct, govern, and guard his heart, as far as in him lieth, that neither will nor defire, love nor longing, opinion nor thought, shall spring up in his heart, or have any abiding-place in him, fave fuch as are meet for God and would beseem Him well, if God Himself were made Man. And whenever he becometh aware of any thought or intent rifing up within him that doth not belong to God and were not meet for Him, he must refist it and root it out as thoroughly and as fpeedily as he may.

By this rule he must order his outward behaviour, whether he work or refrain, speak or keep filence, wake or fleep, go or stand still. In short: in all his ways and walks, whether as touching his own business, or his dealings with other men, he must keep his heart with all diligence, less the do ought, or turn as fide to ought, or suffer ought to spring up or dwell within him or about him, or left anything be done in him or through him, otherwife than were meet for God, and would be poffible and feemly if God Himfelf were verily made Man. Behold! he, in whom it should be thus, e . whatever he had within, or did without, would be all of God, and the man would be in his life a follower of Chrift more truly than we can understand or fet forth. And he who led fuch a life would go in and out through Chrift; for he would be a follower of Chrift: therefore also he would come with Christ and through Chrift unto the Father. And he would be alfo a fervant of Chrift, for he who cometh after him is his fervant, as he himfelf alfo faith : " If any man ferve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my fervant be."* And he who is thus a fervant and follower of Chrift, cometh to that place where Chrift himfelf is; that is, unto the Father. As Chrift him-* John xii. 26.

felf faith: "Father, I will that they alfo, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am."* Behold, he who walketh in this path, " entereth in by the door into the sheep-fold," that is, into eternal life; "and to him the porter openeth;"+ but he who entereth in by fome other way, or vainly thinketh that he would or can come to the Father or to eternal bleffednefs otherwife than through Chrift, is deceived ; for he is not in the right Way, nor entereth in by the right Door. Therefore to Him the porter openeth not, for he is a thief and a murderer, as Chrift faith.

Now, behold and mark, whether one can be in the right Way, and enter in by the right Door, if one be living in lawlefs freedom or licenfe, or difregard of ordinances, virtue or vice, order or diforder, and the like. Such liberty we do not find in Chrift, neither is it in any of his true followers.

* John xvii. 24. † John x. 1, 3.

CHAP. LIII.

Confidereth that other faying of Chrift, " No Man can come unto me, except the Father which hath fent me draw him."

HRIST hath alfo faid : "No man cometh unto me, except the Father which hath fent me draw him."* Now mark : by the Father, I underftand the Perfect, Simple Good, which is All and above All, and without which and befides which there is no true Subftance, nor true Good, and without which no good work ever was or will be done. And in that it is All, it muft be in All and above All. And it cannot be any one of those things which the creatures, as creatures, can comprehend or underftand. For whatever the creature, as creature (that is, in her creature kind), can conceive of and understand, is something, this or that, and therefore is fome fort of creature. And now if the Simple Perfect Good were fomewhat, this or that, which the creature understandeth, it would not be the All, nor the Only One, and therefore not Perfect. Therefore also it cannot be named, feeing that is none of all the things which the creature as creature can comprehend, know, conceive, or name. Now behold, when this Perfect Good, which is unnameable, floweth into a Perfon able to bring forth, and bringeth forth the Only-begotten Son in that Perfon, and itfelf in Him, we call it the Father.

Now mark how the Father draweth men unto Chrift. When fomewhat of this Perfect Good is difcovered and revealed within the foul of man, as it were in a glance or flash, the foul conceiveth a longing to approach unto the Perfect

Goodnefs, and unite herfelf with the Father. And the ftronger this yearning groweth, the more is revealed unto her; and the more is revealed unto her, the more is she drawn toward the Father, and her defire quickened. Thus is the foul drawn and quickened into a union with the Eternal Goodnefs. And this is the drawing of the Father, and thus the foul is taught of Him who draweth her unto Himfelf, that she cannot enter into a union with Him except she come unto Him by the life of Chrift. Behold! now the putteth on that life of which I have spoken afore.

Now fee the meaning of thefe two fayings of Christ's. The one, "no man cometh unto the Father but by me;" that is, through my life, as hath been fet forth. The other faying, "no man cometh unto me except the Father draw him;" that is, he doth not take my life upon him and come after me, except he be moved and drawn of my Father; that is, of the Simple and Perfect Good, of which St. Paul faith: " when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." That is to fay; in whatever foul this Perfect Good is known, felt and tasted, so far as may be in this present time, to that foul all created things are as nought compared with this Perfect One, as in truth they are; for befide or without the Perfect One, is neither true Good nor true Substance. Whofoever then hath, or knoweth, or loveth, the Perfect One, hath and knoweth all goodnefs. What more then doth he want, or what is all that "is in part" to him, feeing that all the parts are united in the Perfect, in One Subftance?

What hath here been faid, concerneth the outward life, and is a good way or accefs unto the true inward life; but the inward life beginneth after this. When a man hath tafted that which is perfect as far as is poffible in this prefent time, all created things and even himfelf become as nought to him. And when he perceiveth of a truth that the Perfect One is All and above All, he needs must follow after Him, and ascribe all that is good, fuch as Substance, Life, Knowledge, Reafon, Power, and the like, unto Him alone and to no creature. And hence followeth that the man claimeth for his own neither Substance, Life, Knowledge, nor Power, Doing nor Refraining, nor anything that we can call good. And thus the man becometh fo poor, that he is nought in himfelf, and fo are alfo all things unto him which are fomewhat, that is, all created things. And then there beginneth in him a true inward life, wherein from henceforward, God Himfelf dwelleth in the man, fo that nothing is left in him but what is God's or of God, and nothing is left which taketh anything unto itfelf. And thus God Himfelf, that is, the One Eternal Perfectnefs alone is, liveth, knoweth, worketh, loveth, willeth, doeth and refraineth in the man. And thus, of a truth, it fhould be, and where it is not fo, the man hath yet far to travel, and things are not altogether right with him.

Furthermore, it is a good way and v access unto this life, to feel always that what is best is dearest, and always to prefer the beft, and cleave to it, and unite onefelf to it. First : in the creatures. But what is best in the creatures? Be affured : that, in which the Eternal Perfect Goodness and what is thereof, that is, all which belongeth thereunto, most brightly shineth and worketh, and is beft known and loved. But what is that which is of God, and belongeth unto Him? I anfwer : whatever with justice and truth we do, or might call good.

When therefore among the creatures the man cleaveth to that which is the beft that he can perceive, and keepeth fteadfastly to that, in fingleness of heart, he cometh afterward to what is better and better, until, at last, he findeth and tafteth that the Eternal Good is a Perfect Good, without measure and number above all created good. Now if what is beft is to be dearest to us, and we are to follow after it, the One Eternal Good must be loved above all and alone, and we must cleave to Him alone, and unite ourfelves with Him as clofely as we may. And now if we are to ascribe all goodness to the One Eternal Good, as of right and truth we ought, fo must we also of right and truth afcribe unto Him the beginning, middle, and end of our courfe, fo that nothing remain to man or the creature. So it should be of a truth, let men fay what they will.

Now on this wife we fhould attain unto a true inward life. And what then further would happen to the foul, or would be revealed unto her, and what her life would be henceforward, none can declare or guess. For it is that which hath never been uttered by man's lips, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive.

In this our long difcourfe, are briefly comprehended thofe things which ought of right and truth to be fulfilled : to wit, that man fhould claim nothing for his own, nor crave, will, love, or intend anything but God alone, and what is like unto Him, that is to fay, the One, Eternal, Perfect Goodnefs.

But if it be not thus with a man, and he take, will, purpofe, or crave, fomewhat for himfelf, this or that, whatever it may be, befide or other than the Eternal and Perfect Goodnefs which is God Himfelf, this is all too much and a great injury, [and hindereth the man from a perfect life; wherefore he can never reach the Perfect Good, unlefs he firft forfake all things and himfelf firft of all. For no man can ferve two mafters, who are contrary the one to the other; he who will have the one, must let the other go. Therefore if the Creator shall enter in, the creature must depart. Of this be asfured.]

CHAP. LIV.

How a Man shall not seek his own, either in Things spiritual or natural, but the Honour of God only; and how he must enter in by the right Door, to wit, by Christ, into Eternal Life.

F a man may attain thereunto, to be unto God as his hand is to a man, let him be therewith content, and not feek further. [This is my faithful counfel, and here I take my ftand. That is to fay, let him ftrive and wreftle with all his might to obey God and His commandments fo thoroughly at all times and in all things, that in him there be nothing, fpiritual or natural, which oppofeth God; and that his whole foul and body with all their members may stand ready and willing for that to which God hath created them; as ready and willing as his hand is to a man, which is fo wholly in his power, that in the twinkling of an eye, he moveth and turneth it whither he will. And when we find it otherwife with us, we must give our whole diligence to amend our ftate; and this from love and not from fear, and in all things what foever, feek and intend the glory and praise of God alone. We must not seek our own, either in things ipiritual or in things natural.] It must needs be thus, if it is to stand well with us. And every creature oweth this of right and truth unto God, and especially man [to whom, by the ordinance of God, all creatures are made fubject, and are fervants, that he may be fubject to and ferve God only].

Further, when a man hath come fo far, and climbed fo high, that he thinketh and weeneth he standeth fure, let him beware left the Devil ftrew aftes and his own bad feed on his heart, and nature feek and take her own comfort. reft, peace, and delight in the prosperity of his foul, and he fall into a foolifh, lawlefs freedom and licentioufnefs, which is altogether alien to, and at war with a true life in God. And this will happen to that man who hath not entered, or refuseth to enter in by the right Way and the right Door (which is Chrift, as we have faid), and imagineth that he would or could come by any other way to the highest truth. He may perhaps dream that he hath attained thereunto, but verily he is in error.

And our witnefs is Chrift, who declareth: "Verily, verily, I fay unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the fheepfold, but climbeth up fome other way, the fame is a thief and a robber."*

* John x. 1.

[A thief, for he robbeth God of His honour and glory, which belong to God alone; he taketh them unto himfelf, and feeketh and purpofeth himfelf. A murderer, for he flayeth his own foul, and taketh away her life, which is God. For as the body liveth by the foul, even fo the foul liveth by God. Moreover, he murdereth all those who follow him, by his doctrine and example. For Chrift faith: "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that fent me."* And again: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord?+" as if he would fay, it will avail you nothing to Eternal Life. And again: "Not every one that faith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which isin Heaven." But he faith alfo: "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments."§

* John vi. 38. + Luke vi. 46.

‡ Matt. vii. 21. § Matt. xix. 17.

And what are the commandments? "To love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy foul, and with all thy ftrength, and with all thy mind; and to love thy neighbour as thyfelf."* And in thefe two commandments all others are briefly comprehended.

There is nothing more precious to God, or more profitable to man, than humble obedience. In His eyes, one good work, wrought from true obedience, is of more value than a hundred thousfand, wrought from felf-will, contrary to obedience. Therefore he who hath this obedience need not dread Him, for fuch a man is in the right way, and following after Chrift.]

That we may thus deny ourfelves, and forfake and renounce all things for God's fake, and give up our own wills, and die unto ourfelves, and live unto God alone and to His will, may He help us, who gave up His will to His
